

Nixon Believes Strengthened NATO Answer To Tough Attitude Shown by Russia at Geneva

RECORD RUN—The atomic submarine Nautilus, with crew members and observers on deck, nears its dock at Groton, Conn., after completing a run of 25,000 miles without refueling. Navy Seey. Charles S. Thomas, aboard the powerful undersea craft, said the Nautilus "has far exceeded the Navy's most optimistic expectations" on its record smashing run.

Nothing Should Be Spared To Increase European Defenses

Washington — (U.P.) — Vice-President Richard M. Nixon believes that a strengthened North Atlantic Treaty Organization is the answer to Russia's tough attitude at the recent Geneva conference.

"No effort should be spared" in increasing the West's European defenses in view of Russia's tactics at the Big Four foreign ministers meeting. Nixon told the United Press in an exclusive interview.

A high diplomatic official said Nixon's view reflects the official position of the administration. The official said great importance is being attached to the next NATO meeting Dec. 15 in Paris.

The State Department Wednesday published a 307-page record of what transpired at the Geneva conference. It showed, among other things, that Dulles charged Russia with trying to perpetrate "a cruel deception" of the world with its disarmament proposals.

NATO Strengthening Need
Nixon said the failure to make progress toward settling international differences at Geneva "has shown more than ever the wisdom and necessity of increasing the strength of NATO and maintaining the bonds of friendship of the free world."

He also voiced hope that there will be an increased exchange of visits between top officials of the United States and other free nations. This is increasingly important in view of Russia's attempts to split the Western alliance, the vice-president said.

The Geneva papers were made public Wednesday night after Dulles himself revealed inadvertently that the State Department had compiled a record of the Oct. 27-Nov. 16 Geneva meeting.

Reporters were startled to see a Dulles-photographed copy of the document in the hands of Portuguese Foreign Minister Dr. Paulo Cunha as he left Dulles' office. Newsmen immediately demanded copies.

Contradictory Statements Cited
The documents showed that Dulles, on Nov. 11, charged that Russia had made contradictory statements on whether international controls were possible on reduction and prohibiting of nuclear weapons. The day before Molotov had talked about "effective international controls . . ."

But Dulles recalled that last May 10 Russia had said there were "possibilities beyond the reach of international control."
Dulles also gave the Russians a blunt and homespun argument on the West's reasons for seeking free elections as a condition for reunification of East and West Germany.

He said free elections would give East German Communists an opportunity to explain "the merits, if there are merits," of their social system. Then, he said, all Germans would go to the polls, and "if they want this system, which to Mr. Molotov seems so good, they will vote to take it. If they do not like it, they will not take it."

Officials said Britain and France approved U.S. publication of the Geneva documents. Russia's agreement was not asked.

Reopening of Albany Plant Will Be Aired

Washington — (U.P.) — Gov. Paul Patterson of Oregon said here today that the National Security Council will discuss today his proposal to reopen the federally owned zirconium plant at Albany, Ore.

Patterson said reaction to his plea for reopening was unexpectedly speedy. But he said there was no indication whether the security council would reach a decision on the plant at its meeting today.

Interest in the plant is held by the Office of Defense Mobilization, Atomic Energy Commission, the Bureau of Mines and the Department of the Army.

Zirconium, an atomic reaction by-product, was first developed at the Albany plant through methods evolved by Bureau of Mines researchers. The government has launched a five-year zirconium procurement program but has denied prospective bidders use of the Albany plant.

Franco Sees Monarchy Necessity in Spain

Madrid — (U.P.) — Generalissimo Francisco Franco believes that restoration of the monarchy in Spain will come as "a historical and traditional necessity."

He did not say when he expected a new king to rule Spain but he warned that any future monarchy must be "preeminently social and popular or it could not exist."

He told a news conference that during talks with U.S. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, who came here during the Big Four foreign ministers conference at Geneva, there was "complete coincidence of thought."

Commenting on Morocco, Franco said that even though Sultan Sidi Mohammed Ben Youssef had been restored to the throne and certain mistakes had been corrected, unrest was bound to remain because "there are some people who are interested that it continue."
