The Medical Roundup

by Walter Alvarez

Emeritus Consultant in Medicine, Mayo Clinic
Emeritus Professor of Medicine, Mayo Foundation

ON GIVING PATIENTS INFORMATION

I have been much impressed by the number of intelligent persons who keep telling me of their distress when, after an examination or an operation, they could not learn what was found or done. Perhaps they were told simply, "Take this medicine," or "We'll operate on you tomorrow," or "You have von Recklinghausen's disease, or neurocirculatory asthenia, or infectious mononucleosis, or disseminated lupus erythematosis." Naturally this sort of thing left them more frightened and worried and up-in-the-air than they were before they went to the hospital.

So often we physicians hate to stop and spend time trying to give the patient some idea of what disseminated lupus erythematosis is. The other day I heard a brother physician trying to help such a patient by telling him that it was a collagen disease. You laymen can realize how greatly enlightened and satisfied and reassured the patient was!

My more enlightened medical brethren today are realizing that the man had a right to be told that he had a rare and poorly-understood disease that sometimes kills. That it tends at times to quiet down and then it may flare up badly. Fortunately, today, many of the patients are tided over their flare-ups with the help of cortisone.

Report To Patient Hoped

I hope that gradually, with time, more of us physicians will outgrow the old idea that a doctor could and should disregard the desire of his patient to know what is going on. I hope that some day, after every abdominal operation, the surgeon will give the patient a report of what was found and done! also, a copy of the report of the pathologist, saying what he found on microscopic examination of the organ or bit of tissue removed. Why do I hope this will be done? Because, in just the last two months I have seen a number of women who, a year or two ago, had some operation performed. In one case the husband is a prominent attorney, and yet he was unable to learn what was found, and what was done to his wife.

Why did I much want to know what was found, and why was the information so important to that woman's welfare? Because, if cancer was found, then almost certainly, the woman's symtoms today indicate a return of the disease. If no cancer was found, then I can give the woman and her husband some hope.

Hope to Stop Growth

In one case there was a question of a tumor, found and partially removed, had originated in the ovary or the colon. If it came from the ovary then today there would be much more hope of stopping its growth with radiation and male hormone than if it came from the colon.

In another case, the woman had had a goiter removed, and later much radiation to her neck. She says her doctor refused to tell her anything. Now, when she comes with weird symptoms that suggest the presence of a scattered cancer, I so wish I could learn what type of tumor was removed from the neck. But I cannot find out. If the tumor was a certain type of cancer of the thyroid gland, the woman might now be helped by radioactive Iodine.

Often, when an operation has to be performed on a patient of mine, I find it helpful to draw a little diagram or to reach back of my desk for a book on anatomy in which I can show the patient the part of his body that has become diseased. I can then give him some idea of how the defect is to be repaired.

In many a case I almost cure a patient simply by getting him to see clearly what his problem is. Usually, when he is satisfied that his disease is never going to "turn into anything" or kill him, home he goes, happy and satisfied and reassured. One of the unhappy things we doctors often do is just to grunt when a patient asks, "Will this mangled hand of mine ever be of much use again?" or "Will I be able to walk again, or will I ever be able to go back to my job?" Commonly, we doctors don't answer such questions because we are not sure what will happen. We hate to make a promise that may not be fulfilled, or we think that what we say may so discourage the patient that it will interfere with his recovery.

Much Kinder

We physicians have always had the queer idea that when a woman's breast is removed we should not handicap her recovery by promptly answering the tremendous question that is in her eyes or on the tip of her tongue. We think it better to wait a week, or even to refuse ever to discuss the subject. Actually, through the years, a hundred women who had been through this ordeal have told me that it would have been so much kinder to have told them the truth as soon as they were out of the anesthetic. It was actually a relief to know the worst. As many a woman has said to me, "When my surgeon dodged my questions as to what had been found I was terribly cast down—feeling that the tumor must have been hopelessly malignant. Actually, later, I learned that it had a low grade of malignancy and had not involved the glands in my armpit. If the surgeon had only told me this as he made rounds the evening of my operation, I would have been so relieved and so happy."

Dr. Alvarez regrets he hasn't the time in which to read or answer requests for information.

If you ask one, you'll find that city officials get fighting mad and deny that Hawthorne Park is being turned into a real estate sub-division.

If you hurry, you still have a chance to get a lot right next to ours which just happens to have a swimming pool and bath house in the back yard.

Broadbent Assumes Duties At Crater Lake

John M. Broadbent, new chief ranger at Crater Lake National park, arrived at the park Wednesday with his wife Lynn and their sons, Jock, 13, and Tommy, 8.

Broadbent, who replaced Carlock Johnson, assumed the duties of chief ranger yesterday.

Broadbent was district ranger for several years in the Elwha district of Olympic National park, Wash., where his duties included operation of winter sports activities at Deer Park.

Pilot, Aircraft Cadet Positions Now Open

Enlistments for pilot and aircraft observer trainees as aviation cadets in the Air Force are open to qualified applicants between 19 and 26½ years old.

Testing and qualifying of aviation cadets for the two flying training programs was halted for a short time last summer because of a temporary surplus of candidates.

Those interested may contact the local Air Force recruiting station in the post office building for additional information.
