The Medical Roundup

by Walter Alvarez

Emeritus Consultant in Medicine, Mayo Clinic
Emeritus Professor of Medicine, Mayo Foundation

PERSONS WHO HAVE NEITHER CONSCIENCE NOR SHAME

A few weeks ago the country was shocked to read the confession (now repudiated) of a man who, according to the papers, said that in order to get some insurance money he sent his mother hurtling to her death. It is hard enough to imagine a man's plotting to kill the mother who had been kind and good to him and what at the time was paying back out of her earnings a few thousand dollars he had obtained with the help of bad checks. As always happens in these cases, he had quickly spent all the money on riotous living.

It is hard enough to conceive of a man so callous as to murder his mother in order to get money for a binge: It is almost impossible to conceive of a man so utterly without concern for anyone as, thoughtlessly, to send to their death 43 persons whom he didn't even know. Many persons must have asked themselves, "What sort of a man can this be? Can he be sane?"

In most cases like this, such a man is what psychiatrists call a psychopathic delinquent. He is a man who has no purpose or aim in life, no conscience, no shame, and no desire to settle down to have a job, a wife, a home and a future. These men (and women) drift along, going usually from one scrape to another. Fortunately, in most cases, their crimes are minor ones, such as petty swindling, writing checks, stealing cars—just for a ride about town—or going on an alcoholic binge which may cost a well-to-do father a thousand dollars or more.

Home Rental Example

To show what these men will do: A young man, while his parents were out of town for a week-end, leased their house to a man, collected two months' rent in advance, and, with the money, went on a bender. One can imagine what a snarl-up there was when the parents returned, and one marvels how an intelligent man could do such a dirty trick, knowing that in a few days it would be discovered.

A psychopathic delinquent is born often to highly respectable and well-to-do parents who spend most of their days buying off outraged persons who have been victimized. One of my friends, who had such a son, spent perhaps $100,000 keeping him out of jail.

The best description I know of these delinquents was written by Professor Cleckly. In a series of brief but vivid biographies he showed how aimless a life these delinquents live. They do what they want to do and they never think of the punishment they will bring on themselves, the sorrow they will bring to their parents, or the annoyance or loss they will bring to the victims of their mischief.

They run up big bills with no thought of paying them. They marry, but, being incapable of loving, they usually soon desert the wife.

Hope of Rehabilitation

Because they often are clever and very ingratiating, they are picked up and almost adopted by kindly persons who hope to rehabilitate and reform them. But as Dr. George Thompson says (after years of studying these persons in police courts) they never stay reformed.

One great difficulty in dealing with these persons is that after a man has appeared in court several times the judge says to the police, "I am fed-up with this fellow. Don't bring him in here again. He is not a criminal: when he steals a car he does not try to sell it, and he does not try to avoid arrest; he is just a bad boy who has never grown up. Next time you arrest him, take him to the mental hospital, that is where he belongs." But when he is taken to the State Hospital, the superintendent says, "He does not belong here; I cannot hold him because, according to all legal tests, he is sane." And yet, so long as he (or she) is at large his most unfortunate family is not going to have any peace, or let-up from expense and shame.

Born Wrong

From my experience with many of these persons, I feel sure they were born wrong and are likely always to be wrong. It is no use trying to change them because when they were born, decency, honor, good sense, a purpose, shame, consideration for others, and an ability to reform and go straight were left out of their nature.

Our laws should be amended so that these persons can be quickly recognized and then kept in a sort of penal colony for life. Today, because they cannot be committed, and because their depredations are usually classed as misdemeanors, they are always being quickly set free—to go on from one bit of skullduggery or crime to another.

Dr. Alvarez regrets he hasn't the time in which to read or answer requests for information.

GOOD NEIGHBORS

York, Neb.—(U.P.)—Neighbors of J. C. Ediger moved onto his farm with every piece of corn-picking equipment they could get their hands on and harvested 70 acres of his corn after he was injured in a grain elevator accident.

Laboratory chickens are being taught to smoke and used in cigarette research.

You won't have to wait long for some chicken's testimonial which reads "I used to have a scratchy throat all the time and then I discovered it was from eating chicken feed."

Coloring Books Land In 'Forbidden' File

Buffalo, N. Y. — (U.P.) — Two art professors have tossed children's coloring books into the "mustn't touch" pile formerly reserved for horror comic books.

George K. Stark and Harlan E. Hoff of Buffalo State Teacher's College were firm in their denunciation of coloring books as a means of amusing a child.

"Coloring books are completely devoid of any relationship to the child's basic experiences," they warned.

"They dictate subjects, matter, style, adult standards and taste, leaving no room for the child to make decisions or expand his horizons and capabilities in his own personal fashion."

One-Shot Salk Program Will Be Considered

Washington — (U.P.) — The nation's top polio authorities have been summoned to a conference here today to consider recommending a one-shot vaccination program to make present Salk supplies go farther.

The present program calls for three injections over an eight-month period. To reach as many children as possible before the new polio season, many experts believe that the schedule should be cut back temporarily to only one shot.
