

SOC Play To Open Friday

Ashland — Final rehearsals are being held for the fall term play, "Mr. Pim Passes By" which will be presented Friday-Saturday, December 9 and 10 in Churchill hall auditorium by the SOC Players group under the direction of Dr. Dorothy Stolp. Curtain times is 8:15 p.m.

The players are working hard to capture the light, gay, whimsical quality of this comedy. Miss Stolp pointed out: "As this is one of Milne's best plays, we are expecting a large turnout for opening night."

George Marden, justice of the peace and member of an old English family is played by Ken Ellis. In addition to his judicial duties, he is at being a gentleman farmer who is very much interested in his livestock—even going so far as to carry on his most weighty discussions in front of some of his farm animals.

Dinah, his niece (Patsy Roberts), is interested in a young painter, Brian Strange (Howard Cain), who paints triangular clouds and square sheep.

Olivia Marden (Mary Ann Munson) spends most of the play sewing on some gay curtains which George says he won't have hanging in the house that was "good enough for my grandfather, great grandfather, and all the rest of them."

Mr. Pim (Francis Chasm) is the little man from Australia whose inability to remember names brings about complications in the Marden family household.

Lady Marden (Norma Cook) is the dignified head of the family. She spends her time beagling when she is not advising the family on manners. Ann (Viola Rice) is the proper English maid in the Marden family household.

Husband, Wife Build Braided Rug Business

Essex Center, Va. — (U.P.) — A husband and wife here have combined their talents to build a homemade braided rug business.

For many years Mrs. Frank Colby braided rugs alone, until one day her husband "picked up the needle and started sewing the braid." He hasn't lost interest since, Mrs. Colby said.

While she does the braid work her husband stands by with a steel lacer to sew each braid as it is completed. It takes about seven weeks to make a 9x12 rug.
