The Medical Roundup

DISCHARGE FROM THE NIPPLE

Many women worry about a little discharge from one or both nipples. Especially when this is bloody, especially when it comes from only one breast, and especially when the woman is over 45 or 50, this may mean trouble. Always such a breast should immediately be examined. If no nodule can be felt in the substance of the breast, it is probable that there are tiny wart-like growths in some of the ducts which pass through the nipple.

Today, some physicians are examining the discharge with what is called the Papanicolaou technique. The fluid is smeared on a glass slide and immediately stained and studied under the microscope. An expert can recognize cells which have originated in a cancerous growth. If no such cells are found, the patient can be reassured.

A good surgeon hates to remove a woman's breast if he can possibly avoid it. Unfortunately, one cannot very well remove just the nipples because the scar would dam up the scores of milk-forming glands, and this could lead to trouble. In those cases in which the discharge appears at the same time in both nipples, the probability is that the cause is not cancer. A cancer is more likely to appear in one breast at a time.

Goodness for Granted

For those many persons who tend to worry themselves sick, fearing that almost unwittingly they have committed some minor sin or other, I have what is usually a helpful idea, and that is, that most of us should and must take our essential goodness for granted. If we were to stop and think for a moment we would see that essentially we were good, honest, kindly people. Under such circumstances it is silly to worry about a possible pecadillo, or the idea that perhaps we have committed "the unpardonable sin," whatever that is!

I have had ministers and priests tell me how, finally, after repeatedly listening to some worrisome woman who kept returning to confess some unimportant "sin" which she wasn't even sure she had committed, they had had to order her to forget it, and to quit coming back to talk about it. They told her that they doubted if the Good Lord ever concerned Himself about such minor and questionable sins. They doubted, also, if a person who was so concerned over so minor a sin had good sense.

Many a time I have had to point to a woman that, while she was spending hours of time worrying about a possible mistake in caring for a child who died, she was neglecting and treating shabbily her husband and her remaining children. She was giving the children her hurtful idea that she loved only the one who died. She had no right in her grief to be so selfish and so hurtful to others.

Often I have to point out to such a woman that the Good Lord does not demand of us that we be prophetic and able to see into the future. When a loved one is very ill and dying all that we need do is to get the best medical help that we can find. After the loved one is gone, it is foolish and wrong to sit brooding for months, wondering if the patient could have been saved if we had called another physician or another suregon, or rushed the invalid to a great clinic.

Coos Bay Workers Get Retroactive Pay

Portland — (U.P.) — A Federal judge yesterday awarded more than $15,000 in retroactive wages to some 300 Coos Bay Lumber company workers.

The back wages are for the period from Sept. 13, 1954 to Jan. 1, 1955.

Federal Judge Edward P. Murphy of San Francisco, who heard the case on temporary assignment here, made the ruling.

The employees returned to work in September of 1954 after a strike with an understanding that they would be paid retroactively any wage increase granted by a governor's lumber fact-finding board. But the company claimed an oral agreement between it and the CIO Woodworkers union local modified the contract between the two.

The workers will get retroactive pay in varying amounts, averaging about $50 each.

FINED ON DRUNK CHARGE

Portland — (U.P.) — William Parks, 26, arrested Sunday on a drunk charge and held for further investigation after police found a holdup note in his pocket, was released by police yesterday. Parks was fined $20 on the drunk charge.

Within 400 years some 2,200 vessels have been wrecked in the turbulent seas off Cape Hatteras, where strong winds churn the Gulf Stream as it flows north across shallow reefs.

As We Live

By ELIZABETH HURLOCK, PH.D.

Marriage Should Be Treated As Partnership

Several weeks ago, I wrote a column in reply to a letter from a woman who was troubled by the problem of "freezing up" whenever her husband wanted to touch her. She felt she was being unfair to her husband and his attitude toward her had changed as a result of her frigidity. I have received many letters since that column appeared and here is one of them.

(Q) "In my nearly 30 years of married life to a wonderful man, sex has played a very minor part in our lives, yet we have had a very happy life together. Why is so much emphasis placed on sex in married life and the great need for it? You should have given the woman who wrote to you a comforting answer by stating that sex is only part of marriage and it is up to the individuals as to how great a part it should play. It should not be the cause for marital breakdowns as your suggestel. When a woman can no longer bear children, why does she have to indulge in a lot of sex when it has no appeal and never has had?" R. C.

(A) The suggestion made by the writer of the above letter is that the woman should decide, on the basis of her own feelings about the matter, how important a role sex should play in her marriage. This suggestion overlooks completely the fact that marriage is, or should be, a partnership with both partners having equal rights and responsibilities.

When there is a difference of opinion on any subject, whether it be money or sex, both partners should have their say and a compromise be made when a woman is "frigid" in the sense that love repulses her, and when her husband would like sex to play a normal part in his marriage, there is bound to be trouble.

Only when both partners are satisfied to have sex play only a small role in their marriage can their lives together be truly happy. Should one partner feel cheated, and it is generally the husband who does so as men rarely suffer from "frigidity," then he is likely to hold a resentment against his wife that will make a happy marriage impossible.

SLIGHT OVERSIGHT

Hastings, Neb. — (U.P.) — An enthusiastic boatman bought a fine new anchor, attached it to a heavy rope when he got out into the deep part of the Harland County Dam then threw the anchor overboard. Then he discovered he had neglected to tie the rope to his boat.

Many Hungary Workers Will Lose Jobs Soon

Vienna, Austria—(U.P.)—More than 4.5 per cent of Communist Hungary's workers will lose their jobs next year when the nation's investment in light industry is decreased, the Budapest newspaper Seabad Nep said today.

The newspaper said most of the jobless persons would be moved to collective farms. "Our light industry is too old-fashioned to compete with foreign countries," the newspaper said.
