Eugene Man Spends Day In Deep Canyon

Eugene—(U.P.)—Edward Ransdell Gregg, a 23-year-old Eugene diesel mechanic, was reported in fair condition Saturday at Sacred Heart hospital here after spending nearly 24 hours at the bottom of a 300-foot canyon in sub-freezing weather.

As We Live

By ELIZABETH HURLOCK, PH.D.

This Is the Day To Turn Over A New Leaf New Year's Day, in the minds of most people, is the day of the year when they should turn over a new leaf in their lives, discard the things that proved detrimental or harmful to them during the past year, and begin from scratch, as reformed people.

Dr. Hurlock

However, it rarely works out that way. Habits have a tendency to get a hold on people. They make it so much easier to do things in the old, familiar way that people stay in the ruts they have made over the years.

Rescue crews brought Gregg out about 9:30 a.m. Saturday from the canyon along Highway 58 about 18 miles east of Oakridge. Doctors said he suffered severe frostbite, bruises and cuts.

Gregg had been dispatched at 3:30 a.m. Friday by his employer, the Cummings Diesel company of Eugene, to repair a truck at Halfway House on Highway 58. When he hadn't returned by 8 p.m., the company called state police.

A company search crew found a spot where it appeared that a vehicle might have gone off the road but the searchers could find no trace of Gregg at the bottom of the canyon. They were preparing to leave when they heard a noise. Investigating further, they found Gregg standing alongside his panel truck. He had been pounding the side of the truck with a wrench to attract attention.

A stretcher crew had to walk a quarter of a mile up the road to find a place to get down into the canyon to bring Gregg out.

He told police he twice had attempted to climb out of the canyon, covered by a foot of snow, and once got within 10 feet of the top when he slid back.

LETTERS FROM READERS Easily excited: "Why do some people become so excited by trivial things while others keep calm in the same circumstances?"—A.C.

(A) People who become excited easily by trivial things may be temperamentally different from those who keep calm. Everything arouses them easily to emotional states, whether it be fear, curiosity or anger.

(B) The trouble with most people is that they see so many things in themselves they would like to change that they bite off more than they can chew. The result is that they become discouraged at the enormity of their task and do little or nothing.

(C) If you are one of the people who made New Year's resolutions in the past and have found they were never realized as the new year progressed, here are some suggestions that should help you to have better success this year than you have had before.

Hard To Change Trait (1) Decide on one or two things you would like to change. Pick out from the many the ones that would be most helpful to you if they were changed and concentrate on them.

(2) Convince yourself that you really want to change and that you will be the one who will profit most by the change. This will give you the necessary motivation to carry through, no matter how rough the going is.

(3) Don't allow yourself to become discouraged and disheartened if you do not see immediate improvement or if you see yourself slipping backwards occasionally. It takes time to change. The more often you allow yourself to slip backwards, of course, the longer the time needed for the change will be.

Home for elderly: "My mother is getting along in years and is all alone except for her married children. She wants to go to a church home for elderly people. Do you think she would be happy there?"—U. B. T.

(A) Many old people are happy in church homes because they are with people whose interests are similar to theirs and because they do not feel they are imposing on their children by going to live with them. The attitude of the person who goes to live in a home has a great deal to do with the person's adjustment to the home.

(B) Mrs. Cornett will remain in office through the May primary and will serve until after the party's national convention in San Francisco in August.

(C) Mrs. Cornett, widow of the late president of the Oregon Senate, said she would remain active in party affairs as a private citizen.

(D) Mrs. Cornett will remain in office through the May primary and will serve until after the party's national convention in San Francisco in August. She gave no reason for her retirement.

Services For Campbell Of UP Held Saturday New York—(U.P.)—Funeral services were held Saturday for Charles E. Campbell, 61, former secretary of the United Press. Campbell died of a brain hemorrhage Thursday. He was stricken at his Flushing, Long Island home on Christmas Eve and never regained consciousness.

Interim Committee To Meet Tuesday

Salem—(U.P.)—Modification of the state law governing registration of voters and repeal of the petition method of placing names on the primary election ballot will be studied by the Legislative Interim committee on Elections here Tuesday.

The committee, headed by Sen. Pat Lonergan of Portland, will also consider proposals to make registration lists available at cost for partisan political purposes, to change the present system of filing registration cards and to permit registrars to conduct neighborhood canvasses for the purpose of registering qualified citizens.

Senators Recommend New Mental Hospital

Salem—(U.P.)—Two Oregon state senators Saturday recommended that the new state mental hospital to be built in the Portland area be named for the late Dr. F. H. Dammasch, who sponsored the institution.

The recommendation, made in a letter to Gov. Paul Patterson, Secretary of State Earl T. Newberry and State Treasurer Sig Unander, was made by State Sens. J. O. Johnson of Tigard, Republican, and Monroe Sweetland of Milwaukie, a Democrat.

"We would consider it altogether appropriate to make this great new institution a memorial to the physician and statesman who sponsored it—the Dr. F. H. Dammasch Hospital," the letter said.

Dr. Dammasch died in Portland Thursday after suffering a stroke last Monday.

Mrs. Cornett Won't Seek Reelection

Klamath Falls—(U.P.)—Mrs. Marshall Cornett, Republican national committeewoman from Oregon since 1948, has announced she would not seek reelection.

Mrs. Cornett, widow of the late president of the Oregon Senate, said she would remain active in party affairs as a private citizen.

During her first term of office Mrs. Cornett was appointed to the party's national executive committee.

Mrs. Cornett will remain in office through the May primary and will serve until after the party's national convention in San Francisco in August.

She gave no reason for her retirement.

Typhoid Shots Given At Marlene Village

Beaverton—(U.P.)—Preventive shots against typhoid fever and paratyphoid were being given 70 residents of Marlene Village, a residential area three miles north of here, as a follow-up to last week's flooding.

The inoculations were being made by Dr. Welles W. Bretherton, with vaccines furnished by the Washington county health department.

Flunks Swimming Test; Saves Life Later

Hillside, N. J.—(U.P.)—Charles Marter Jr., 14, recently flunked a Red Cross life saving test but passed a tougher test Friday.

Marter saw Thomas Monaca, 8, plunge through the ice of the Elizabeth river and dived in to save the youngster boy.

Forgotten Man

It is about time the race tracks of this country erected a monument in memory of Pierre Oller. Pierre invented the pari-mutuel system of wagering on thoroughbreds. That was in Paris in 1865.

The Oller system called for taking only 5 per cent of the money wagered. That is about the right percentage. Race tracks could give 2 per cent to the State government and take 3 per cent for themselves and still make plenty of money.

Get It Right

Again I note the remark, "What this country needs is a good five-cent cigar," credited to former Vice-President Thomas R. Marshall. That crack was originally made by Kin Hubbard. Marshall was quoting Hubbard. Get it right!

Asking

Queries from clients. Q.—Who starred in the silent film, "Why Change Your Wife?" A.—That picture had an all star cast which included Thomas Meighan, Gloria Swanson, Bebe Daniels and Theodore Kosloff. Q.—What was the name of the pitcher who had the "Indian sign" on Babe Ruth and repeatedly made the "Sultan of Swat" look ridiculous? A.—Hub Pruet of the St. Louis Browns. Hub really had Ruth's number. One season Babe went to bat against Pruet 16 times and struck out 13 times!

So They Say

Men born under Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 22) are inclined to rush thoughtlessly into a love affair and to become quickly involved to the extent of an engagement to be married. That's why Sagittarians brack more engagements to be married than men born under any other sign. Or, so say the stargazers.
