Total of 9,411 Acres Burned In Fires Here

A total of 9,411 acres of timber, valued at $79,622, was burned in 60 forest fires in Jackson county of the Southwest district of the state forest patrol during 1955. Ted Maul, district warden, has announced.

The total represents some 35,025,000 board feet of timber.

Maul pointed out, however, that 35,000,000 board feet were involved in three major fires Labor Day week end, and about 90 per cent of the latter is salvagable.

The Sept. 5 forest fires—Timber mountain near Jacksonville, Blackwell Hill and Sykes Creek burns—were started from lightning and two power line breaks, and burned over 9,145 acres, 4,850 of which contained merchantable timber.

The actual loss value of the Labor Day week end fires was listed as $52,550, Maul said, and the loss to reproduction value was $15,852. Total loss listed as $78,382, $10,000 of which was listed as value of property loss. Property included residences which were destroyed in the path of fires.

Of the 60 forest fires in the county last year, 18 of them started from lightning and burned over 2,223 acres, half of which was merchantable timber land containing 3,635,000 board feet. Fifteen fires were caused by miscellaneous reasons, including power line breaks, and burned over 3,600 acres of merchantable timber with 31,370,000 board feet.

Campers caused one fire of 10 acres, smokers started 14 fires which burned over some 119 acres, 116 of which was non-forest land, and two fires started from debris burning, Maul said. Logging operations resulted in seven fires burning over 46 acres, and railroads caused three fires, burning over three acres of nonforest land.

Of the 60 fires, 33 of them were regarded as class A fires, those up to and including one-fourth acre, Class B fires, of which there were 21, are fires in areas between one-fourth acre to and including 10 acres.

In addition to the three class C fires Labor Day week end, other class C fires included the Blackwell fire early last summer, a 35-acre early fire on Emmigrant creek and an 111-acre fire on Nugget Butte near Gold Hill. Class C fires are those over 10 acres.

In an article in the "Bundesbahn," official magazine of the state-owned railroads, the expert said the initial cost plus research still to be done puts the nuclear-powered locomotive far into the future.

Hiring and Firing Said Hardest Executive Task

Chicago—(U.P.)—The hardest part of a corporation president's job is hiring the right key executives and firing the ones who fail, according to a survey conducted by Science Research Association, personnel and management research organization.

Researchers found that the "odds are four times as high that a president will postpone correcting a known personnel mistake as that he will fire too early or unwisely."

More than one-third of the 746 presidents queried listed this as the single most critical mistake they made last year.

Atomic Locomotive Said Far in Future

Frankfurt, Germany—(U.P.)—A German railway expert said today that the atomic locomotive of the future would cost four times as much to build but would run on one-tenth of the fuel costs of present convention types.
