The Medical Roundup

We Physicians Should Be More Friendly With Patients

Much of the happiness that has come to me in my 50 years of the practice of medicine has come because of warm friendships it brought me. When one shares anxieties with a fellow human being, one tends to come very close emotionally to that person and his family. Every Christmas I get scores of letters from old patients, a few of them from my San Francisco days, 30 years and more ago. Oftentimes, as I read one of these kindly letters, my mind flashes back, perhaps to a night when I sat beside a bed, hoping, hoping I could find some treatment that would stop an important life from ebbing away.

Often it is so easy to make a dear friend of a patient that I feel sorry that so many of my medical and surgical brethren miss this joy. It doesn't take much time to stop and say a kind or a cheering word, or to respond to a person's feelings toward a better acquaintance and some friendship. Some of my surgical friends say to me with annoyance: "My patients pay me for an operation; not for chatting with them." But I am sure that the stand they take not only robs them of a much richer life—it accounts for much of the bad feeling that has come up between us physicians and the public.

Wasn't Grateful
I remember reading in the autobiography of a famous surgeon, that when wounded in France in World War I, he was so skillfully treated by an army doctor that, he felt that for the rest of his days, he ought to be grateful to the fellow, but he wasn't. He always remembered that doctor with great dislike. Why? Because the doctor left him with the feeling that was an inanimate object whose pain, anxiety, great homesickness, and fear of future disablement or death were of no interest whatsoever. A few words of kindness and encouragement

Tongay Has Another Taste of Freedom

Mobile, Ala.—(U.P.)—Russell Tongay sprinted from his guard to brief freedom Tuesday after feigning helplessness during a four day train journey from Los Angeles.

The controversial swimming instructor, serving a 10-year manslaughter sentence for the death of his tiny daughter Kathy in a 33-foot exhibition dive, was being returned to Florida after a previous escape.

Authorities said Tongay bolted from his Pullman stateroom bed as the train began moving from the station and outdistanced Prison Officer Gig Powledge in a five-block foot race.

Tongay was captured hiding under a mid-town residence and placed in a solitary cell in the county jail.

Engineer Surveying Flood Damaged Roads

L. C. Jensen, an engineer from the state bureau of public roads, Salem, yesterday started a survey of flood damage to county roads and other property.

He is one of six sent from the office to make estimates for emergency federal aid and long-range rehabilitation aid.

Gov. Paul Patterson last week requested President Eisenhower to allocate $1,650,000 to aid in disaster relief in western and southern Oregon.
