Advises Against Going To Yuba City For Work

Marysville — (U.P.) — Building and construction trades workers should not come to the Marysville-Yuba City area for work, C. R. Van Winkle, vice-president of the Yuba-Sutter Central Labor Council said Saturday.

Van Winkle said only 50 per cent of the local union members have found employment. He said work hasn't even been started on restoring the hundreds of homes damaged in the Christmas floods. He urged outside labor to hunt for work elsewhere.

TO TRAIN GERMANS

Bonn —(U.P.)— Four American officers and 28 enlisted men have begun a course of instruction for the new German army. They will train German recruits in the use of American arms.

According to Dr. Norma V. Schiedeman, of the University of California at Los Angeles, the left-handed child can be helped if his parents will start early to teach him to scribble from left to right, and to make with his pencil or crayon clockwise rotary movements. With the mother's hand guiding his, he can be taught to make sweeping strokes and large loops from the left edge of the paper to the right. Later, he can learn to make smaller loops and rings of this type.

Dr. Scheideman is satisfied that if parents will do this sort of thing, the child, on reaching school, will not be so overwhelmed with the problem of writing. He will be prepared for making the left-to-right movements.

Children Who Can't Read

In regard to children who have great difficulty in reading, I just received an interesting letter from Dr. Joseph E. McClelland, a pediatrician of Cleveland, who examines school children. He says he has found that much of the difficulty in reading and writing found in some children is associatel with the fact that they are mixed-up on their right-handedness or left-handedness. The doctor says, "First, I ask the mother if the child is right-handed or left-handed, or if there is a tendency in the family for persons to use both hands. Next, I look at the child's head to see where the crown is. In a right-handed child the crown is usually on the left—and vice versa. Occasionally I encounter a double crown. This almost always connotes a mixed laterality. Then I make tests to see if the child is right or left-handed, or right or left-eyed, or right or left-footed.

Mixed Laterality

"In a surprisingly large number of children one finds a mixed laterality. A frequent finding is a right-handed child who is left-eyed or vice versa. Or, the child is right-handed, right-eyed, and left-footed. Then I get the child to write the numbers from one to ten. In cases of mixed laterality several of the numbers will be written backwards. The importance in diagnosing mixed laterality is that the teacher can then know the children who are headed for reading difficulties, especially if they enter a school where reading is taught by the so-called modern picture method.

"If a child has reading difficulty this should be recognized when he is in the first grade."

Whenever the doctor recognizes a child with mixed laterality, he warns the teacher that the youngster should be taught reading by the old-fashioned method in which he will learn the alphabet, and then will learn to spell words syllable by syllable. This sounds sensible to me. One big trouble with our school system—clear up to the senior year in Medical school—is that everyone is supposed to be treated in the same way. In medicine, the brilliant student who will be a research worker or an outstanding specialist or a great teacher must get the same training as is given the poor student who will be happy some day with a tiny practice in a village.

George Wants US To Take Offensive In Cold War Effort

Washington —(U.P.)—Sen. Walter F. George said today the United States should "take the offensive" in cold war diplomacy. He called for "definite programs to let the free world know just where we stand."

The influential Georgia Democrat, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said that "as soon as we can take a positive position, it will be better for us and the free world."

George avoided open criticism of the State Department or any of its officials. But his remarks significantly followed stepped-up Democratic charges that the department's policy planners have been caught of guard by some recent world developments.

Planners in Same Rut

Another Senate leader, Chairman Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.) of the Armed Services Committee, said in an interview that the department's planners on the foreign aid program, for example are "in the same old rut."

Russell told the United Press he was "amazed" at the department's reaction to the reception given Soviet Premier Nikolai A. Bulganin and Communist party boss Nikita S. Khrushchev on their recent swing through Asia. He said that after the Communist leaders made promises which may never be filled, "all our people could do was wave their arms and talk about spending more money" in the area.

Healthy Baby Contest Offers Cash Prizes

A total of $720 in cash prizes will be awarded to parents of winning babies in the Oregon Healthy Baby contest, which opened last week, according to J. E. MacDonald, district sales manager for Morning Milk, sponsors of the contest.

Rules and entry blanks are available at all grocery stores in the area, MacDonald said.

Parents with babies three years old or younger are eligible to enter. Judges now being selected will be announced later.
