It travels to Klamath Falls for games Friday and Saturday against the Pelican, who have been rated the club to beat in the circuit.

The Pels consistently give the Tornado cagers a rough and rugged time on the Klamath court and this year they present a considerable advantage in height with three men 6 feet 5 inches or better and two of them usually in the line-up at the same time.

Coach Frank Roelandt this week has had Medfordites working against the possible offense Klamath may use. Because of the big effort that will be needed at Klamath Falls drills have not been so hard in physical exertion as those of pre-conference. Roelandt commented that the Tornado will have to be "way up" and alert to trim the Pelicans.

Flood Control Backed By Izaak Waltonians

Members of the Jackson County chapter of the Izaak Walton League of America favor control of floods in the Rogue river basin along with many other organizations, groups and individuals in the valley.

That strong sentiment and stand was evidenced last night during consideration at a chapter meeting of a proposed resolution to actively support and promote efforts on the part of various agencies in controlling floods.

Action on the resolution was tabled until a committee, probably of directors, has time to study it and determine its exact wording. But the feeling of members, favoring steps protecting against inundations by the Rogue and its tributaries, was expressed in the discussion. No one spoke out against flood control.

President Norton Smith stressed that Waltonians are just as interested in the matter as anybody. But he pointed out that the organization is looking out for the interests of the fishery which has considerable economic value to the area.

The Izaak Walton league has been subject to some criticism but various spokesmen at the meeting at the Hight Real Estate office voiced the feeling that such criticism has been unjust. They expressed support for "proper" flood control measures.

The proposed resolution presented by Col. Paul Weiland, state IWL director and a past president of the county chapter, called for particular backing of the soil conservation service and the farmers of basin. He favored the SCS plan of control by surface treatment, impoundment of runoff water in detention reservoirs and automatic release and regulation of water to keep it from overflowing banks below. Surface treatment includes methods to produce in-soak of water into the soil.

Loggers Rap Jacksonville

Jacksonville—Jacksonville had had the field goaling edge but Butte Falls high piled up a huge margin at the free throw line here last night to whip the Redskins 72 to 48 in a non-counting basketball game between the two Jackson County B league members.

The Loggers put in 34 out of 46 free shot attempts while Jacksonville collected only eight for 26 tries. Jacksonville had 20 field goals to the Loggers' 19.

The Redskins had the lead a couple times in the first quarter and once in the second but Butte Falls pulled away in the second half. Period scores all favored the Loggers 13 to 12, 36 to 24 and 51 to 34.

Bill Irwin had 28 points for Butte Falls while Pat Conley got 15. Norm Pawlowski had 16 and Bob Guches 14 for Jacksonville.

The Redskins showed spirit and hustle and improvement despite the setback. Butte Falls won the jayvee conflict 72 to 28.

LINE-UPS: Butte Falls 72, 48 Jacksonville, B. Irwin 28, 3 Allen, P. Conley 15, 1 C. Smith, Mattern 6, 16 Pawlowski, M. Conley 2, 14 Guches, D. Ellis 9, 4 Daley. Substitutions—For Butte Falls, D. Smith 4, Henshaw, J. Irwin, Henshaw 2, for Jacksonville, Driskell 2, McKeen, Dowell 2, King 4, Huener 2.

Weiland also pointed to the need for so-called dry dams, empty dams, for controlling floods rather than the full dams required for multipurpose uses.

Izaak Walton league opposition to Plan A in 1948 for development of basin water resources was outlined. It was pointed out that the high dam proposed would have destroyed spawning beds and could result in making stream flow below very low. There was less objection by the IWL at the time to Plan B which eliminated the high dam proposed at Lewis creek. It was also mentioned that plan C actually had its birth in the IWL and was, virtually the same as the current Talent reclamation project.

Whether the chapter should support flood control efforts or just a survey to see what was needed was discussed also last night and fear was expressed that the surveys being asked would result in just another plan for a high dam.

Necessity of the cooperation of all interests in the valley in order to get action was brought out. It was said unfortunate that the chapter has not been brought into resolutions prepared by other groups here. Rogue Rod and Gun club, Grants Pass, has been included by groups in its area and has passed a survey resolution.

Waltonians were told that some of the old advocates of Plan A are right in the background of present efforts. Angling Proposals

Proposals to cut the Rogue trout season back to Oct. 1 from Oct. 31 and to reduce the steelhead bag limit from three to two were mentioned to the membership in other discussion. Possibility of cutting the Applegate river winter steelhead season to Jan. 1 through 31 was also told. Also contemplated is the opening of Willow creek reservoir at the same time as Fish lake for trout angling ahead of other Cascade lakes. Willow creek opening would represent an exception to late opening of lakes in national forests.

The Oregon State Game commission meets next Friday to draw up tentative angling regulations.
