As We Live

By ELIZABETH HURLOCK, PH.D.

HUSBAND CONSTANTLY BIDS FOR LIMELIGHT

There are some people who cannot bear to have others the center of attention while they take a back seat.
 (Q) "I am devoted to my husband and sure he is devoted to me also but there is one thing about him that disturbs me very much. Whenever we are at a party or even with just a group of friends, he constantly interrupts me when I am talking about the most trivial mistakes I make. For example, I mentioned the other day that there were 150 people at the church bazaar. He at once corrected me and said there were 153 people. I was merely talking in general figures and I didn't think the three extra people mattered at all. Also, when I am telling a story about something, he will interrupt me and add something I had not put in. I realize that I am not a very good story teller but, at the same time, it embarrasses me to have my husband take over and finish what I am saying for me. Why does he do this and what can I do to make him stop it?" U.S.T.

Dr. Hurlock and corrects the most trivial mistakes I make.

(A) To answer your first question I would say your husband hates to be in the background while all attention is focussed on you. So, to bring himself into the limelight and have peo-

Around Hollywood

By ALINE MOSBY

Hollywood — (U.P.) — For 22 years a man named Henry Grace has held one of the most important and envied jobs in the cinema city — making beds for Grace Kelly, Lana Turner and other beauties to climb upon.
 The king of the boudoir is a set decorator at MGM whose specialty is fashioning beds for movie sets. He has made beds of roses, beds to dance on, beds for beauties to sob on and lie upon.
 Recently he composed a high point in his career: A record number of five beds for Lana Turner to slip into for "Diane." Courtesan Portrayed.
 In the film, Lana plays a famous courtesan of 16th Century France. When she first arrives at the palace, she sleeps in a narrow, simple bed. As she acquires a procession of royal lovers the beds are elaborate four-poster, canopied affairs.
 "A bed can be a very important part of a plot," explained Henry today as he held forth on the subject in his bedless office.
 "In 'Young Bess' to show the change in Jean Simmons' age we started her in a narrow, simple bed, suggesting a virginal quality. As she matured the beds widened."
 Decorator Henry's bed-making goes back to Joan Crawford's "Sadie McKee" of the '30s. Her bed was in that "cornball modern style of that time."
 In Henry's office hang photographs of his other famous beds — the huge white ruffled organ-die bed Jeannette MacDonald slept on "The Merry Widow" — the pad-on-a-block bed for Norma Shearer in "Romeo and Juliet" — Greta Garbo's death-bed with its huge, ruffled square pillow for "Camille."
 The bed-maker's biggest headache: Keeping the stars cool in bed.
 "For many scenes they have to get into bed, as Grace Kelly did in 'The Swan,'" he said. "Under those blankets and hot lights, it's a tremendous heat problem. We make the blankets and comforters thin."
 Henry's bed is simple and modern. He never has insomnia.

Services Looking For Airbase Site

Washington—(U.P.)—Rep. Walter Norblad (R-Ore.) said Saturday that both the Navy and Air Force were cooperating in the search for a joint site for an airbase in Oregon.

Norblad said the Air Force planned to abandon its base at Portland International Airport because of traffic congestion and inadequate runways. The Navy's plans to build a reserve base at Hillsboro have encountered public opposition.
 Col. H. H. Banks was scheduled to open quarters in the United States Customs House in Portland Monday to start site surveys in Northwest Oregon. Norblad said he had been assured that his proposal to establish the base at Astoria would be given careful consideration. Portland officials expressed surprise at the Norblad announcement but said they would not contest abandonment of the base if the Air Force deemed such a move necessary.

 David C. Ducan, president of the Portland Chamber of Commerce, said "because of the targets which the Portland base is assigned to defend, we understand that it must be located within 30 miles of Portland."
