Scientist Would Lock Up Sick Americans

By DELOS SMITH
United Press Science Editor
New York—(U.P.)—To achieve an ultimate good, a noted scientist is advocating "locking up" a certain number of sick Americans.

The ultimate good is making tuberculosis an extinct disease. The sick persons are those who know they have TB but won't submit to treatment and won't take themselves out of circulation.

"Personal liberty is a precious heritage, but liberty should be denied those who knowingly expose others," said Dr. H. Corwin Hinshaw, clinical professor of medicine, Stanford University School of Medicine.

Would Have Curled Hair
He was answering the question, "Can we wipe out TB?" His answer was, yes, if... Such an answer to such a question, if he had been given 10 years ago, would have curled the hair of anyone who knew anything about TB.

His principal "if" was preventing well people from getting the disease. That involves "case finding"—finding the people who have TB but don't know it. It also involves dealing with the people who know they have

TB but won't do anything about it. Both kinds spread TB among well people.

Dr. Hinshaw, who is a noted authority on TB and a former president of the American Trudeau Society, was himself greatly impressed by what has happened to TB in the last five to ten years. Formerly it was "essentially incurable"; in most cases the future was bleak if not hopeless.

Treatable Disease
"Tuberculosis is now, as never before, a treatable disease—a curable disease," he said. "Modern treatment can relieve tuberculosis symptoms, promptly bring the disease to arrest, and can usually prevent—or at least minimize—the risk of recurrence. This has not been subjected to the full test of time but is based on a firm foundation of fact."

Navy Releases Balloons in Japan

Tokyo—(U.P.)—The United States Navy released the first of 20 huge weather balloons in Japan this morning, aiming them toward this country on the same path that Japanese incendiary balloons traveled during World War Two.

Today's balloons were directed to the level of the jet stream, which is expected to waft them all the way to our east coast within a week. When they lose their own floating power, parachutes will open automatically and gently lower the balloons to the ground.

On their trip, the balloons will pick up valuable weather information by means of radio transmitters. All this information will be passed along to weather organizations throughout the world. And it should provide some new data on upper atmospheric conditions.

The Japanese had some success with their balloon project during the war. They used the jet stream to send balloons into our Pacific northwest to touch off forest fires.

Of course the Navy's project is strictly a peaceful one. But some people are likely to find it suspicious.

As Lt. Com. M. Lewis of the Bureau of Aeronautics said—"I expect there will be reports of flying saucers over the United States in a few days."

Gasoline Dealers To Meet Here

Recently elected officers of the Oregon Gasoline Dealers association will meet here Wednesday afternoon to consider moving the state office from Salem to Medford temporarily.

The move is being considered because most officers and directors elected recently are from southern Oregon.

Steve Harriman, Dillard, was elected president, Paul Coleman, Klamath Falls, vice president, and Victor Milnes, Medford, secretary-treasurer. Directors are Ben Hallyburton of Portland, Ray Berger of Eugene and Pete Whitney of Eugene.

TRAVELER-HUNTER TO PREMIERE JUNGLE FILM

John Newman, noted Spokane, Washington traveler and lecturer on world missions is pictured with the 500 pound Royal Bengal Tiger he bagged recently in the Indo-China jungles. He will display the eleven foot trophy in Central Point at the area Premiere of his new CinemaScope film, "Trail's End." The motion picture was photographed in "the wonderland of Asia" by Vision, Inc., of which he is vice-president. Newman has engaged in overseas missions on five continents.

The film story traces the activities of the pioneer-spirited missionary who one day finds himself summoned to a village to kill off marauding tigers terrorizing the natives and the next day traveling by elephant back, sampan or afoot into forbidding jungles where aboriginal blood-hunters conceal poison-tipped lances along the trails in search of human blood for their religious sacrifices. The dramatic-documentary introduces tribal peoples who lead a tight rope existence in an interior mountainous domain over-run with leopards, tigers and other predatory wild life.

As the brilliant jungle scenery takes hold of the imagination, heightened by authentic, synchronous sound, one begins to lose himself with the little band of Christian missionaries as they probe deeper and deeper into the jungle. At its recent World Premiere the film played before 5000 persons in the Spokane Coliseum.

There is no admission charge. A free-will offering will be received.
