

Warren's Name Again Vaulted Into Presidential Spotlight

Washington — (U.P.) — Chief Justice Earl Warren, the man who insists he won't run for President, was the center of political speculation again today.

Morse Attacks 'Anti-Federalists'

Washington — (U.P.) — Sen. Wayne L. Morse accused the Eisenhower administration today of "scuttling" federal programs to "justify its tax giveaway" and to transfer "profitable power sites to private utilities."

The Oregon Democrat said the administration has attempted to "excuse unconscionable acts of favoritism . . . in the name of limiting federal activities."

He referred specifically to the government's role in the Dixon-Yates and Hells Canyon projects.

Morse made the statements in a speech accepting the Sidney Hillman foundation $1,000 award for meritorious public service.

The foundation's seventh annual award was presented to Morse as a "living symbol of the wise, honest and courageous servant of the people."

Neuberger Raps Costly Campaigns

New York — (U.P.) — Sen. Richard L. Neuberger (D-Ore.) said here last night that multi-million dollar political campaigns were a threat to democracy and that legislative safeguards were urgently needed to prevent candidates and parties from "buying public offices like baubles in a jewelry store."

Neuberger proposed that the conflict of interests statute should apply to members of Congress as well as to officials of the executive branch of government.

In Oregon, Neuberger pointed out, it was illegal for a state liquor inspector to accept gifts of a few bottles of whiskey but that a man running for governor could accept thousands of dollars in campaign contributions from men who own distilleries.

Net income last year totaled $3,817,027, an increase of 11.23 per cent over that during 1954. The net income was equivalent to 10.58 times preferred stock dividend requirements, and equal to $2.11 per share on the 1,638,669 shares of outstanding common stock after preferred stock deductions.

NAMED EMERALD EDITOR
Eugene — (U.P.) — Goron Rice of Lakeview has been reappointed editor of the Oregon Daily Emerald for the remainder of the school year, it was announced today.

dent Eisenhower decides against running. And Mr. Warren has continually insisted he would not run.

But many Republicans have believed that the Chief Justice could not resist a draft if the principal drafter were Mr. Eisenhower.

Feeling Described
Mr. Eisenhower obliquely told newsmen yesterday how he felt about the possibility of Mr. Warren running for President.

He recalled that he retired from the Army when he entered politics in 1952. And he added: "We shouldn't get too great a confusion between politics and the Supreme Court."

Many said the President's comment meant he would favor Mr. Warren's candidacy. Many said it meant just the opposite.

Other political developments: 1. Sen Estes Kefauver became the first Democrat formally to enter New Hampshire's first-in-the-nation presidential primary.

As his name was filed, the Tennessee senator pressed his attacks on the Eisenhower administration in a speech-making swing through Wisconsin. He charged the administration with "playing politics with peace."

2. Heart specialist Paul Dudley White planned to spend the first half of February trying to get an electrocardiogram of a whale off the California coast. But he said he will keep in close touch with the White House in case the President wants his next physical examination earlier than scheduled.

3. Sen. Richard L. Neuberger (D-Ore.) said a second-term bid by Mr. Eisenhower would make the President's health a campaign issue over-shadowing all others. Neuberger said in a letter to his constituents "there even exists the danger that panicky politicians . . . might try to have him propped up unwisely with drugs."

4. Adlai E. Stevenson called the President's annual economic report "full of generalities." The candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination said the report was "disappointing" as a guide for future economic policies.

5. Sen. James E. Folsom on the Alabama legislature's "nullification" resolution of the Supreme Court desegregation ruling: "For the legislature to declare Supreme Court rulings null and void is like a dog braying at the moon and claiming it's tired."

6. Broadway showgirl Shirly Conway, who towers more than six feet, on meeting Princess Margaret: "I didn't realize she was so small—or so stunning. Her eyes and skin are incredibly lovely."

7. Dr. Geoffrey Fisher, the archbishop of Canterbury, disputing the Encyclopedia Britannica's claim that King Henry VIII divorced two of his wives: "He had the marriages annulled, which is a quite different thing from divorce. Annulment says there was no marriage at all and therefore you are free to marry."

Child Talks Way Into Heroine Role

Stowmarket, England — (U.P.) — A nine-year-old girl was a heroine today because she talked too much. By speaking out of turn Kathrynne Flett saved her 38 school mates from possible death or injury Wednesday.

During the arithmetic lesson Wednesday, Kathrynne leaned over and began whispering to a classmate. Schoolmaster Philip Fisher caught her and as punishment kept the entire class inside when it came time for recess.

Three minutes after the recess bell rang, fragments of a jet airplane crashed into the school yard where the class would have been playing if Kathrynne didn't like to talk.

3600 Acres of O&C Land Burned During Past Year

Portland — (U.P.) — Thirty seven fires seared 3600 acres and caused some $530,000 damage in western Oregon O & C lands last year, Bureau of Land Management Supervisor Virgil T. Heath said today. Salvage of the fire-killed trees may recover most of the loss, he said.

New Lumber Grading Rules Go Into Effect March 15

Portland—Not since Swan Alverderson wrote the world's first lumber grading rule at Stockholm, Sweden, in 1754 has a new grading rule caused as much comment as the west coast rule 15, which will become effective March 15.

The region's 250,000 lumber workers and the nation's 3,000,000 carpenters and uses will have four new name grades to learn — construction, standard, utility and economy, which, replace old grades, 1, 2, and 4. Most other changes are minor.

Three Years Preparation
Three years in preparation by a committee of industry leaders, the rule will cover douglas fir, west coast hemlock, western red cedar and Sitka spruce lumber produced in western Oregon, Washington and British Columbia and northern California. It changes rules in effect for 50 years.

Half the nation's softwood lumber consumption will be affected. The new rules will conform to modern merchandising methods, will eliminate misunderstanding verbiage of past rules, and will be better understood by Basicly all lumber is graded for its suitability for the use intended. There are two major divisions of grading; for appearance (clears, uppers and pattern grades) and for strength (construction lumber, joists, timbers, dimension).

Users will be concerned primarily with new construction grades and with clear and finished items for more particular work.

Fir and hemlock have definite stress values established by years of use and many tests, and as a result, fir and hemlock dimension grades are assigned specific strength factors.

The fibre stress value of present 1450 grades has been changed to 1500f, and 1100f has been increased to 1200f. The thickness of boards and finish items has been reduced from 25/2 to 3/4 inch, because half the items sold today are in the 3/4-inch thickness. The rule provides that 6 inch material becomes 5 1/2 inches instead of 5 1/2. This already applies to wider sizes, 7 1/2, 9 1/2 and 11 inch nominal width and is in accordance with the American lumber standards.

Select merchantable remains as the top grade in boards and select structural is the top dimension grade. The lettering system for flooring, casing and other clear items is unchanged, excepting that the top grade of flat grain clears becomes C&Btr, instead of B&Btr.

Copies of the rule will be available to retailers, contractors, architects and lumber users in advance of March 15, according to West Coast Lumber Inspection bureau, sponsor of the rules.
