

Chicago Teen-Ager Kills Policeman in Latest Outbreak of 'Wolf Pack' Juvenile Terrorism

Chicago — (U.P.) — A gun-packing teen-ager shot and killed a veteran policeman Wednesday night in Chicago's latest outbreak of "wolf pack" terrorism.

It was the second time a Chicago teen-ager had killed within 24 hours.

At the very time that Policeman Lyons Kelleher was being gunned down in a South Side night club, two teen-agers were surrendering on a street corner for the fatal stabbing of a youth Tuesday night.

Within the past week, juvenile "wolf pack" gangs have slugged a teacher in a school room corridor and swaggered along sidewalks, attacking anyone who caught their fancy. Mayor Richard J. Daley called an emergency meeting of top officials Wednesday to stop the bloodshed.

Kelleher, a veteran of 23 years on the police force, was killed during a routine check-up at a Negro district jazz spot which was reported to be rendezvous for narcotic addicts.

Trail of Blood
His slayer, identified as a 19-year-old Negro youth, escaped while another policeman, badly wounded, emptied his gun at him. A trail of blood on the sidewalk indicated the killer had been hit at least once.

Kelleher, 53, and his partner, William Derrig, 38, entered the Boulevard Colonial Room at the Boulevard Hotel about 11:15 p.m. The night spot was filled by about 25 hot music fans who were waiting for a jazz band to strike up.

Derrig went into the room while Kelleher stood at the door. Suddenly, a youth broke from the bar and tried to get past Kelleher.

The policeman grabbed him and said "where are you going?" The youth twisted a way and came up with a sub-nosed revolver.

Kelleher drew almost simultaneously, but he was too late. The youth fired four shots into his chest and then whirled on Derrig with a shot which pierced his right hand.

Shot in Leg
Derrig, his gun-hand streaming blood, ran after the fleeing youth, firing as he went. Outside on the sidewalk, the youth turned and brought the policeman down with a bullet in the left leg.

Another manhunt ended almost simultaneously when Robert Hoffman and Richard Fernandez, both 19, surrendered to

Gloria Swanson Feels Like Trapped Criminal; Photographers Seen Below

By GLORIA SWANSON
Written for United Press
Rome—(U.P.)—As I looked from the windows of my apartment I saw men with cameras darting about on the street below and pointing to my floor. I felt like a trapped animal.

And so did Sir Laurence Olivier, whom they had followed to my address.

They never would have believed, even if we had sworn on a stack of Bibles, the reason for our lurching together. The truth is a simple and sad story of a "Gal Friday" who once worked for me back in the 20s and 30s. Later, she went to work for the Oliviers. Now she has fallen desperately ill, so most of our visit concerned our "dear Ethel."

However, before his visit came to an end, we talked shop. What two actors don't? And we reminisced, of course, because Larry Olivier made his first talking picture with me when I produced a movie in London in 1952.

I reminded him of a crazy week end on the Thames when he climbed a tall flag pole and we all had a fit and such a time getting him down.

Sleeping Beauty
Leaving "then" for "now" he told me there is a possibility he will make "Sleeping Beauty" two of Chicago's top policemen. Hoffman had been named as the youth who stabbed and killed 20-year-old William McNeff in a street brawl Tuesday night.

Deputy Police Commissioner Kyrone Phelan said a man called his home at 11 p.m. and told him Hoffman and Fernandez were waiting to surrender on a street corner.

Phelan drove with Chief of Detectives Patrick Deeley to the corner and found the sloppily-dressed, bushy-haired youths. They did not resist and Hoffman admitted the stabbing, Phelan said.

with Marilyn Monroe, and that his wife Vivien Leigh will start rehearsals shortly on Noel Coward's newest play.

I amused him with stories of my Italian film, "My Son Nero." Pointing to some ruins on a hill across the street, I told him:

"That's where I, Agrippina, and my son Nero used to live about 2000 years ago."

Larry said he thought he liked my present quarters better—laundry and all.

"What do you mean — laundry?" I inquired.

"Isn't that yours?" he asked laughing, motioning to the left of one of my front windows. I looked and then quickly moved back, avoiding the photographers below. "No, you devil, of course not," I answered. "It's my neighbor's."

Ugly Undies
I must confess that the laundry strung out of all the windows on either side of my apartment amuses me very much indeed, because the city authorities are so very strict about anybody changing the facade of an old building. "But," I continued, "the authorities do nothing about ugly undies changing the appearance of a building."

I paused for breath and he quickly suggested, "Surely you, Miss Soapbox, can change all that with a note to the proper persons. And you might add that the color combinations show no instinct for the aesthetic!"

Time flies, and as he kissed my hand at the door to depart a flash bulb went off. He said "You see, nobody will believe the story about 'dear Ethel'—it's sure to be a new romance, do you mind?"

"Mind. Don't be silly, Sir Laurence, you old flag pole sitter!"

Cahill appealed after he was convicted in a Polk county Circuit Court trial on a charge of venue. He was a commissioner and secretary of the Taft-Nelscott-Delake water district from which he received $750, supposedly to buy water pipe which he said he could get on favorable terms from the government as a disabled veteran.

His defense was that he had returned the money to the treasurer of the district who died a few days thereafter. The state claimed the treasurer's signature on the receipt was a forgery.

Certain signatures of the treasurer which were genuine but which had not been admitted or treated as genuine by Cahill, were placed in evidence and Cahill contended that this constituted error.

Another Bad Year Seen for Farmers

Corvallis — (U.P.) — M. D. Thomas, Oregon State College agricultural economist yesterday predicted that Oregon farmers faced another bad year for income. Thomas said the state's farmers may make only a little more than half what they made in 1951.

The economist said that the "soil bank" plan proposed by the Department of Agriculture would bring only long range benefits to the farms and that the only farmers who would benefit immediately would be seed growers who would find an expanded market for seeds to plant the soil banks.

He said farm surpluses built up in past years would continue to depress prices down this year.

The soil banks would take 10 to 20 per cent of the nation's crop land out of production.

Salem — (U.P.) — James Glen Moore of Portland has filed his candidacy for state representative from Multnomah county on the Republican ticket.

Cahill Conviction Upheld by Court

Salem—(U.P.)—The Oregon Supreme Court has upheld the conviction of Otto W. Cahill of Delake on a charge of conversion of public funds.

Cahill appealed after he was convicted in a Polk county Circuit Court trial on a charge of venue. He was a commissioner and secretary of the Taft-Nelscott-Delake water district from which he received $750, supposedly to buy water pipe which he said he could get on favorable terms from the government as a disabled veteran.

His defense was that he had returned the money to the treasurer of the district who died a few days thereafter. The state claimed the treasurer's signature on the receipt was a forgery.
