

Minister Talks For Meeting of Sorority Chapter

The Rev. John Reynolds, assistant pastor of First Presbyterian church, was guest speaker for Alpha Lambda chapter of Epsilon Sigma Alpha sorority January 23. The Rev. Mr. Reynolds showed slides taken at Beirut, Lebanon, where he spent two years as a student pastor and student at the American university.

The university was founded in 1866 as the Syrian Protestant college but the name was changed to American university in 1920. There were 3000 students at the university during the time the Rev. Mr. Reynolds was attending. With most of them being from the Middle East countries. Classes are conducted in English as most schools start teaching the English language to students when they are in the third or fourth grades.

Lebanon compares in size to the state of New Jersey, being approximately 40 by 120 miles in size, the speaker said. It borders on the Mediterranean sea and has two mountain ranges running through it. It is known as the Switzerland of the Middle East with much tourist trade. There are many examples of the modern world in Lebanon with six-story apartment buildings, running water, electricity and thousands of cars. Electricity is used for lights and radios only, with kerosene being the principal fuel used.

The Islamic religion is observed by 95 per cent of the peoples in most surrounding countries but Lebanon is 51 per cent Christian and 49 per cent Islam. The Islamic religion started in 622 AD and was one of the fastest spreading religions. The Rev. Mr. Reynolds had pictures of some of the Moslem mosques taken in various countries. He also stated

All residents of Phoenix and adjacent territory are asked to indicate their desire to contribute to the March by turning on a porch or driveway light.

The March will start at 7 p.m. and will be signaled by one long wail of the fire siren. All auxiliary members are asked to meet at the home of Mrs. A. H. PTA Congress Announces Plans for 51st Convention

Details of the 51st annual convention of Oregon Congress of Parents and Teachers were reported to the board of managers at a recent meeting in Portland. The convention will be held April 17-19 in Eugene and Mrs. Jennelle Moorehead, Eugene, a past president and current hospitality chairman of the congress, is convention program chairman.

Mrs. Ross Doty, Eugene, convention chairman, and Mrs. Lloyd L. Edwards, Springfield, her co-chairman, announced that plans for handling the huge delegation expected are nearing completion. Transportation has been one of the main problems facing the management committee. The Eugene Hotel will be convention headquarters. General sessions will be held in the Eugene High school, and the workshops and exhibits will be on the University of Oregon campus in the Erb Memorial building and adjacent classrooms. Each of these places is some 13 or more blocks from the other.

The large percentage of both high school and university students who drive their own cars and the resultant lack of parking facilities has further complicated the problem. Every effort is being made to solve the difficulty, and the city of Eugene is extending free downtown parking to delegates. It is also expected that some courtesy transportation from local PTA members will be arranged.

Delegates who pre-register will be able to lunch at the University of Oregon dormitories. A number of special breakfasts, lunches, and dinners have also been planned. Tuesday a men's dinner is scheduled before the evening session. Wednesday morning the eight junior vice-presidents will preside over separate regional breakfasts. These are being held as early as possible in the convention this year to enable delegates to find and get acquainted with others from their areas. The banquet and installation of officers will be held Wednesday evening at the Lane County Fair Grounds, the only place large enough to accommodate the number expected to attend. Thursday morning a presidents' breakfast will precede the general session, and Thursday noon a national Parent-Teacher magazine luncheon is planned. The Mothersingers' concert, always a convention highlight, will be part of the Tuesday session, which will be open to the public.

Emphasis this year, in response to requests, will be on the workshops. A total of 17 separate workshops are being held on every department of PTA work, many being in two sections, one for city PTA's and one for rural PTA's. The high school service workshop is also divided into one for junior and senior high schools, and one for schools which are a combination of high and elementary. Each of the 17 workshops will be repeated four times. The workshops are also being conducted differently this year, with emphasis on specific, step by step helps for new and inexperienced chairmen and presidents.

Principal speakers for the 3-day sessions will be Mrs. Edward T. Walker, Los Angeles, vice-president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers; Dr. Meredith Wilson, Eugene, president of the University of Oregon; and Dr. John Foskett, Eugene, University of Oregon professor. Dr. Foskett, who has made an extensive research into what makes people participate in community activities, is expected to have some answers to the perennial questions "How can we get people out to meetings?" and "How can we get them to participate in the work of our organization?"

Two panel discussions are planned for the final day of convention, the morning one on "The Influence of Today's Community on Your Child," with Dr. R. E. Lieuallen, Monmouth, president of Oregon College of Education, as moderator. On the panel will be Miss Dorothea Lensch, Portland, director of recreation for the City of Portland and recreation chairman of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers; Dr. James Morris, Corvallis, program manager of KOAC; and Dr. H. Harrison Clarke, Eugene, research professor, University of Oregon.

A scientific study of the physical fitness of Oregon's children is now being made, and it is expected that Dr. Clarke will give the first announcement of the findings of this research at that time.

The afternoon panel on "Juvenile Delinquency in Today's Community" will have six high school students, two from Portland, two from outside Portland, and two from rural areas. Wayne Durrell, Portland, registrar at the University of Portland and juvenile protection chairman for the Oregon Congress of Parents and Teachers, will be moderator.

Teacher Attends OEA Meetings

Mrs. Maxine Smith, Medford teacher who is president of the Department of Classroom Teachers, Oregon Education association, is in Portland this week end to attend a planning committee meeting.

The annual convention of National Education association will be held in Portland this summer, and OEA committees are meeting frequently to make convention plans. Five thousand delegates and a total of 17,000 persons are expected to attend the convention, Mrs. Smith states.

Convention plans call for a "chuck wagon" supper at Multnomah stadium to be attended by about 2,000 persons, with a program following for the entire convention body.

The convention will be held the first week of July and will be followed by special workshops at Lewis and Clark college of two weeks duration.

Last week end Mrs. Smith was also in Portland, having attended a meeting of the board of directors of the Department of Classroom Teachers. This group also discussed convention plans.

The week end of January 13 Mrs. Smith attended a meeting of a sub-committee to the advisory committee on teacher certification. Discussion mainly centered on the emergency certificates for elementary teachers.

A statement issued by the sub-committee read: With full recognition of the current shortage of well-qualified teachers, the executive committee of the OEA Department of Classroom Teachers has urged that every effort be made to maintain the standards of teacher certification in Oregon at a high level because of their importance in assuring Oregon school children a continuance of a high quality educational program.

Relative to this action the group commended the Oregon State Department of Education for the objective manner in which it has administered present certification rules and regulations.

Another action of the group called to the attention of the public a statement of the State Board of Education that "every teacher who serves as a substitute teacher or as a regular teacher on either a full or part-time basis in the public schools of Oregon must hold a valid Oregon certificate."

During the business meeting reports were given and plans were discussed for the state convention which is to be held in Medford in April.

Following the business meeting, refreshments were served by the committee in charge. The hostesses were Mrs. Elsie Turner chairman, Miss Yetta Olson, Mrs. Mae Richardson, Mrs. Georgiana Beier and Mrs. Ruth Hawkins.

Art Exhibit Continues

An exhibit of paintings done by artists of this vicinity which went on view last week at Barker's Men's store will be continued through this week, it has been announced. The public is invited to see the show while downtown shopping.

One change, however, will be made. The painting, "Interior," done by Mrs. Dorothy Milbank, Grants Pass, will be replaced by one done by the same artist and originally intended for this showing. The latter painting, entered in a recent, Northwest Artists show at San Francisco, had not been returned in time to be included last week. "Interior," an oil, was lent for the exhibit by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ebbesen, Grants Pass, Mrs. Ebbesen being the former Miss Aecacia Wing of Medford.

Other paintings in the show include an objective modern composition done in mixed media by Steve Bayless, described as a studied line drawing; an objective modern done in oil, entitled, "Structural Study," painted by Warren Wolf; a traditional oil accomplished by small brush method by Mrs. Lue Wilson, Central Point, entitled "Offerings"; a precision drawing in oil by Nicholas Milbank, Grants Pass, named, "Circa 1880"; two entries by Clifford Platz, "Coastal Fog," in palate knife technique, and another in brown tones showing a farm house scene from a barn interior; and a conventional oil by Robert Miller, "Mill and Smoke."
