The Medical Roundup

Baldness

Many men want to know if there is any logical way of avoiding the coming of baldness or if there is any scientific treatment that will bring back hair after it is gone. All my questioners need do is to look at the top of my head and see that I, personally, do not know of anything that will bring back hair. I imagine there are few physicians who attempt to treat baldness. If one goes to a skin specialist, he is likely to try a few so-called scalp tonics; but I think he does it half-heartedly. One could, of course, go to laymen who advertise that they can grow hair but after reading the very unfavorable reports of Better Business Bureaus about some of these men, I would certainly not recommend anyone to go to them. Because most persons want to keep doing something, they can rub in ointments and "hair tonics."

When, in my thirties, I began to lose my hair fairly rapidly, I went to a number of skin specialists and asked them what to do. They all gave me the same ointment, consisting of 10 per cent sulfur and 1 per cent salicylic acid. For years I rubbed it into my scalp every night, but I don't know that it delayed the coming of baldness.

Tendency in Certain Families

If anyone will look about him at fathers and sons, in many a case he will notice that a tendency to the loss of hair runs in certain families. I think right now of a friend who early got a shiny bald head. He has two brothers and an uncle, with shiny bald heads, and by the time he was 35, his son had a shiny bald head. In other families the scalp retains some fuzzy hair, and this type of baldness may appear in generation after generation.

It may be that, in some cases, the baldness is due to dandruff, but no one seems to know what dandruff is due to or what can be done to cure it. It may help to keep the scalp clean with frequent washings with tincture of green soap, but I have no scientific evidence to prove this.

It is obvious that baldness has something to do with the sex glands. Women seldom lose much of the hair on their head, and they practically never get bald in the way a man does. Interestingly, eunuchs who early in life are castrated do not get bald. Theoretically, then, the taking of large amounts of female hormones might prevent baldness, but most men would prefer not to accept this type of treatment for fear of its producing some unpleasant effects.

Washington—(U.P.)—The AFL-CIO Political Education Committee has blasted as Iron Curtain legislation a bill that would ban political contributions by labor unions.

Now is the time to start looking for the unmistakable signs of spring.

50 Positions Open In Park Service

The national park service is now accepting applications for about 50 positions on the staff of a western design and construction office in San Francisco, it was announced yesterday.

Openings for the new office are for landscape architects, civil engineers, and architects. Applications should be sent to National Park Service, 1000 Geary st., San Francisco.

The western design officer will be planning headquarters for improvements in seventeen western states west of the Mississippi and in Alaska and Hawaii.

The use of hybrid corn heralds an era when the national yield per acre may be more than 50 bushels, according to agricultureal resarchers.

Wheat Farmers Meet In Portland Today

Portland, Ore. — (U.P.) — More than 500 wheat farmers from 13 states gathered here today for the 6th annual convention of the National Association of Wheat Farmers.

The highlight of the three-day meeting will be an address tomorrow by Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson, who is under fire from all sides because of a current trend toward higher farm costs and lower prices.

Several resolutions aimed at reducing surpluses, bettering market conditions, improving wheat strains and publicizing the plight of wheat growers are scheduled to be considered by the delegates.

Also scheduled to speak are Rep. Cliff Hope (R-Kan.); Claud Gifford, Philadelphia, editor of the Farm Journal, and Dr. Axel Sven Hokanson, director of the Royal Swedish Wheat Commission.

Oregon Gov. Paul L. Patterson was scheduled to address the convention but died of a heart attack last night.
