

Senator Listens To Proceedings Alone

Washington — (U.P.) — Sen. William Langer (R-ND) sat alone in the Senate yesterday and listened raptly to the proceedings.

Chief Clerk Emory L. Frazier was plodding through a 93-page speech about alien property.

The author: Langer. The North Dakota Senator had clerks read his speech because he has eye trouble. Soon he was the only one listening.

Occasionally a few other senators appeared on the floor. Democratic leader Lyndon Johnson about page four asked Langer if he would call off the reading. Langer refused.

Sen. Estes Kefauver (D-Tenn.) about page 40 called for unanimous consent to deliver a speech of his own. Republican leader William F. Knowland objected.

At the end, Langer stood up and announced: "I yield the floor."

Roseburg Students End MOD Campaign

Roseburg — (U.P.) — Roseburg high school students wound up a week-long polio crusade here yesterday, collecting $10,076 for the March of Dimes.

The school last year set a national record by collecting $8,824.

Quotes From the News

New York—Former President Truman on whether the President needs an assistant:

"The presidency is a six-man job but one man still has to do it. The man who is president should be able to do that job or he shouldn't be there."

New York—Actress Marilyn Monroe in denying a report that playwright Arthur Miller left his wife for her:

"I haven't been dating. I have no romance. It's awful."

Grand Rapids, Mich.—A Standard Oil Co. official on the burglars who took a 450-pound safe from a company service station:

"The safe was empty. We planned to pay to have it hauled to a junkyard."

Knoxville, Tenn.—Mrs. Harland Jacobs, seeking a divorce, in denying she hurled a radio, telephone and other objects at her husband:

"All I ever threw at him was a bowl of soup."

Washington—Rep. Carl Vinson (D-Ga.), chairman of the House Armed Services committee, on passage of the appropriation for an atomic cruiser:

"The day is not far distant when the entire American Navy will be propelled by nuclear power plants."

Chicago—Comedian Eddie Cantor, a heart attack victim, on whether President Eisenhower should run again:

"It's far better for Mamie to have a live husband than for America to have a dead president."

Hollywood—Sid Luft, actress Judy Garland's husband, is denying his wife, who is charged with non-payment of five traffic tickets, ever drove in New York:

"She only drives once in a while out here. And it's worth your life to ride with her."

Around Hollywood

By ALINE MOSBY
United Press Hollywood Writer

Hollywood — (U.P.) — "I went Hollywood. I was immature. I left my wife. I thought I would go farther single. It took me a couple of years to find out I was wrong."

Actor Richard Jaeckel sat in a dreary, grimy fox hole — make-believe movie variety — and talked glumly about "the lesson I've learned."

Three years ago Richard was Terry Moore's handsome boy friend in "Come Back, Little Sheba." He won a Paramount contract and was headed for stardom. Then he dropped out of movies. He also separated from his wife.

Now Jaeckel is back making a fresh start in pictures, in a war film by independent producer Robert Aldrich, "Fragile Fox." What happened to Richard?

Insecurity Poses Threat "Actors who leave home blame their homes for their career problems, but it's their own problem of insecurity," Jaeckel said as he polished his rifle.

"I went Hollywood to a certain extent. I didn't play around but the fields looked greener on the other side of the fence. I only can speak for myself, but when you've got a good wife and home you don't pass it up for something that's different. Some actors think it's great to be a bachelor. But when you analyze bachelorhood and break it down, you're not missing a thing."

Paramount had promised to make another Alan Ladd out of Richard. When the scripts didn't come around, "I loafed at the beach — and not having some work to do didn't help my marriage any," he said.

Actor Versus Bum "After sitting around for a year, I know I had to decide whether to be an actor of a bum," he said. "I left Paramount and went back East for six months to do some live TV shows. Then I toured with 'Desperate Hours' on the stage. You just can't sit around. You have to keep working."

When "Desperate Hours" wound up in a Los Angeles theater, his performance brought him a flood of picture offers. He reconciled with his wife, Tony, and their two children and has settled here again.

"She's a great source of encouragement," he said. "Having a good wife at home gives a person security and solidarity. Being married doesn't have to hinder you."

Saturday and Sunday are generally accepted as the two most dangerous days to drive in modern-day traffic.

January Construction Equals One Year Ago

Construction in Medford during the month of January was about equal to construction a year ago, according to figures released yesterday by the city building department.

Forty-four building permits for construction totaling an estimated $166,140 were issued in January compared to the same number of permits for $161,910.63 in January 1955.
