Young Hostess Is Possibility For White House

By ELIZABETH TOOMEY, United Press Correspondent
New York—(U.P.)—The White House could have the youngest official hostess since 1856 if Adlai E. Stevenson becomes president of the United States.

Mrs. Ernest Ives, the Democratic presidential candidate's only sister, who was ready to assume the first lady's duties four years ago, says the 22-year-old bride of Adlai, Jr., would be the "logical choice," this time.

The former Nancy Anderson of Louisville, Ky., who married Stevenson's eldest son last June, would be the youngest woman to preside at White House parties since James Buchanan, a bachelor, became president 100 years ago. Buchanan asked his sister's daughter, Harriet Lane, to be mistress of the White House. Miss Lane was 23 at the time. Young Mrs. Stevenson will be 23 next October.

"A number of things have changed since the last campaign," said Mrs. Ives, who is a chatty, informal woman and the co-author of a just-published book, "My Brother, Adlai."

"The boys have grown up a great deal in the past four years, and I know that Adlai talks very seriously to his sons about his decisions. I would help my brother in any way I could, but little Adlai's wife is a wonderful girl, and I think now she would be the logical choice to be hostess in the White House."

SOC Professor Talks On Liberal Education

"Man is more than a specialist in some one field—man is first of all a human being," said Dr. Arthur Kreisman, speaking last night for Griffin Creek School club on the values of a liberal education. Dr. Kreisman is instructor of humanities courses at Southern Oregon college.

The speaker added that man should not just "make a living" but first of all be prepared "to make a life."

Defining a "liberal education," Dr. Kreisman stated that almost any subject can be "liberalized" and explained that basically liberal means "something that frees."

"We are all prisoners, bound to the accident of our birth," Dr. Kreisman said, and added that individuals will have the concepts and ideas of only their time and place of living unless they "free themselves." "Man must learn to rise above small local ideas and concepts to bigger ones," he declared and said, "it is not the location but what is in the head that counts—there are 'big hicks' in New York, Los Angeles and Boston. We must learn not just to be citizens of one locality or of the world, but citizens of all time."

A liberal education aids an individual in solving life's problems, Dr. Kreisman emphasized, makes us more efficient human beings, helps us to "live with ourselves and to live with other people."

A general education broadens the scope of friendship, and provides the means by which individuals communicate with one another, the speaker said.

He added that because of an accumulation of learning "every generation sits on the shoulders of its predecessors." "Education and books binds all time together," Dr. Kreisman said, and added that "We can carry on a conversation with Socrates because we have a public library."
