GLOSSITIS, OR ABNORMAL TONGUE

Many ask me what to do for glossitis, or trouble with the tongue, and usually there is little I can prescribe. Fortunately, in most cases, the patient does not need any treatment. Perhaps he has a "geographical tongue," which means that there is a whitened area on it, perhaps with red margins that make one think of a map. That is why we speak of a geographical tongue. I don't know of any good treatment for it.

Other persons are disturbed because the top of their tongue is deeply fissured. Again, I don't know if this is a disease, and I don't know what to do for it. I suspect some persons were born with a tongue like that.

Some persons complain of one or two little white sores which come and hurt a good deal for perhaps five days and then disappear. These are the so-called canker sores. In my experience, they are generally due to the eating of some food, such as chocolate, or tomatoes, or pineapple. If the patient will keep a record of the unusual foods eaten just before one or two of these canker sores come, he may soon learn what he must avoid eating.

Many persons worry a great deal about a coated tongue, but today I think few of us physicians pay much attention to it. There is good evidence to indicate that it is due to the regurgitation of gastric contents during the night. Food comes up from the stomach through the gullet, and this is what coats the tongue. I don't know of any way of stopping the regurgitation of the food.

The Japanese make a little sort of hoe with which they clean the tongue. Also they make their bamboo-handled tooth brushes with a thinned segment which can be bent into a loop. With this, they scrape the top of the tongue. In America some persons take a wash-rag on the top of their finger and with this scrub the top of the tongue. It is conceivable that this cleaning may lower the tendency to the formation of a bad breath.

Missing Beats of the Heart

Persons ask me about so-called missing beats of the heart. Fortunately, in nearly all cases these beats do not constitute a serious disease. They are compatible with a long and comfortable life. Usually, in the cases, the heart, by all tests, is perfectly normal. The extra beats seem to be sent in by way of the nervous system. What happens is that when a tiny beat comes, the next beat is blocked and hence omitted. With this, the heart gets a rest, and so the next beat is a big one. This is the beat that the person feels as a thump, or a "turning-over of the heart."

For years I kept in my office a big book on heart diseases written by the world's greatest authority on the subject—Sir James Mackenzie, of London. I had a mark to help me open to the page on which Sir James trystoiled. All he said was, "The trystoiled. All the said was, 'The patient must learn to get used to them'."

Sometimes if the extra beats come very frequently and are very disturbing, the doctor will give a drug called quinidine. This can quiet the heart muscle.

Glaucoma

One of the commonest causes of blindness in adults is glaucoma. Many persons ask me about it and how it can be relieved or cured. I think usually if a man once develops glaucoma he has to fight it or at least watch it for the rest of his days. In this disease the tension of fluids in the eye-ball becomes too great; more fluid is formed inside the eye-ball than can ooze out during an interval of time. This increased pressure can interfere with the circulation of the retina (or seeing part of the inside of the eye) and this can cause serious trouble. In most cases I think the patient gets by with drops, usually of a drug called pilocarpine; I have known many patients who kept putting in these drops several times a day and every day. Others have a little operation done in which a hole is drilled with the idea of letting some of the fluid out.

Recently, a drug called Diamox has been used. I understand it helps fluid to get out of the eye.

The important point is that glaucoma is a dangerous disease;

Russia Demonstrates Balloon Charges

Moscow—(U.P.)—Russia staged a scientific demonstration for foreign correspondents yesterday aimed at proving that American balloons which landed in the Soviet Union "carried photographic apparatus for military reconnaissance."

Foreign Ministry Press Chief Leonid Ilyichev and a military expert provided the demonstration at an unusual briefing for newsmen at Spiridonovka Palace, the residence of Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov.

Several dozen balloons floated about the palace courtyard. The military expert explained to correspondents the functions of the balloons.

"The balloons are not equipped for weather observation but carried photographic apparatus for military reconnaissance," he said.

MEDFORD IRRIGATION DISTRICT
By J. A. Hofbuhner

hence the condition must be watched by a good eye-specialist. The early symptoms are often much pain in one or both eyes with failing vision. Sometimes the person sees things with a colored fringe around them. Anyone with such symptoms should go right off to a good ophthalmologist or eye physician who will measure the tension of the globe of the eye.

Dr. Alvarez regrets he hasn't the time in which to read or answer requests for information. (Released by The Register and Tribune Syndicate, 1956)
