The Medical Roundup

by Walter Alvarez

Emeritus Consultant in Medicine, Mayo Clinic
Emeritus Professor of Medicine, Mayo Foundation

Cancer on the Face

A woman just wrote "A place came on my face which seemed to be only a scab. I got rid of it only to find another just like it directly underneath it. This condition now has kept up for some months. There is no pain or discharge but I am beginning to get worried."

Walter Alvarez

She should be worried, because this is the typical story of a little skin cancer which should promptly be removed. Many old persons neglect such a little ulcer for years. When I was a young man in California I saw many an old rancher or his wife who came down from the mountains with one of these ulcers on the face bigger than a silver dol- In many cases the only reason why the person came for treatment was that the thing had begun to eat into the nose or lower eyelid or the ear. Sometimes these so-called "rodent ulcers" would grow so slowly that there was no extension into the lymph nodes under the jaw or in the neck. Then the lesion could be cut out and the resultant hole could be covered with a skin graft. When cancer cells had spread from the ulcer into the lymph nodes of the neck the patient was faced with a serious situation.

All persons who have a little scabby lesion on the face that doesn't heal should go right off to a doctor, and perhaps preferably to a skin specailist, because he has the necessary equipment to burn the thing off in 30 seconds. Often he uses very hot blue sparks that come out of an electric apparatus. He will first inject some procaine under the lesion so that the patient will not feel any pain. In the last 15 years I must have had a half-dozen of these things burned off my own face. Obviously, one must go especially quickly when the ulcer starts on or near the nose, an ear or an eyelid.

So far as I know, there is only one nice thing about these little lesions and this is the conviction some statistically-minded physicians have that if a man (or woman) has little cancers on his skin he is less likely to have them on the inside of his body. I hope this is true.

Fortunately, a number of the patches or nodules that come on the face or body of an aging person are not of the type that become cancerous. But no one should treat these things lightly. Everyone with a suspicious patch should go quickly to a skin specialist to see what he will think of it.

Dr. Alvarez regrets he hasn't the time in which to read or answer requests for information.

Britain Says Russia Increasing Tension

London —(U.P.)— Britain formally accused the Soviet Union yesterday of increasing tension by meddling in the Middle East.

The Soviet statement yesterday calling the recent Eden-Eisenhower statement a threat to peace in the Middle East "has given an entirely false picture of the Washington decisions," a Foreign Office spokesman said.

The Moscow statement yesterday accused President Eisenhower and Prime Minister Sir Anthony Eden of creating "a threat to peace" in the Middle East. It said the situation developing in that region "is clearly connected with the security of the Soviet Union."

It also said the Kremlin would consider the sending of British and American troops to the Mideast a threat to peace and an object of "legitimate concern."

Chile Counts 21 Train Wreck Victims

Santiago, Chile —(U.P.)— The casualty toll in Chile's worst train wreck in recent years stood today at 21 dead and 114 others injured, 66 of them seriously.

Authorities began an investigation into the possibility that engineers of the two trains involved had violated safety rules.

The wreck occurred early Tuesday five miles outside Santiago. A special train carrying theater people on a holiday to Cartagena seashore resort rammed into the rear of another passenger train which had made an emergency stop.

BREAKFAST CIUE

Traverse City, Mich. —(U.P.)— Police Capt. George Green couldn't help notice the fancy breakfast ordered by two teenage boys in the restaurant where he stopped for coffee. A little later Green learned that a near by service station had been burglarized of $16. He returned to the boys, and they admitted breaking into the station.

El Centro, Calif. — (U.P.) — A rolling, jarring earthquake shook a widespread area of Southern California at 10:34 a.m. yesterday. It lasted about a minute and a half.
