The Medical Roundup

Persons Who Have Auto Accidents

I am getting discouraged over the daily and hourly injunctions I hear over the radio to "drive carefully" so as to cut down on the number of fatal accidents. I should think the radio announcers would get discouraged, too, because their pleading is having so little effect. During the Christmas week-end over 500 men and women and children were killed, and I do not know how many more were maimed and disfigured and left handicapped for life.

Walter Alvarez

Now I hear that last year 37,000 were killed on our highways. If we men and women were to see those 37,000 laid out, smashed-up, bloody and dead, on two or three football fields we could hardly stand it. If, during a war we were to hear that 37,000 of our boys had been killed in a battle, we would be appalled and angered, but because these auto deaths are taking place every day, and we individuals seldom see a fatal accident, we say nothing, and we do nothing really curative.

What is worse, if our judges were to get tough, if they were to take the license away from every repeatedly drunken or criminally negligent driver, and if they were to punish him severely when he comes in drunk again and driving without a license, we would not back up the judges. We would let some politician interfere and plead leniency for the driver. We would let the man get back in his car so as soon to kill someone else.

As I write this I hear over the radio of men being brought into court with records of several arrests for drunken driving. One such man had a pocketfull of summonses for infraction of the laws of the road. He hadn't bothered to answer them. I was happy to see that this time the judge got angry and sent him to jail for a while but I think he left him his license so that when he gets out he can start wrecking cars again.

Time To Stop Pleading

I think it is time that we in America stopped pleading with people who do not listen. Instead we should get busy on some constructive measures. First, we should realize that the people who need most to reform are not of the type who will listen to our pleadings or will care a hoot about them. Let us get that clearly in our heads. The trouble with most of us in this world is that we were not trained to seek out the facts; then to face them resolutely, and then to do something really constructive about them.

What we need first is a diagnosis. What are the people like who are causing the accidents? Let us go with Dr. Alan Canty into the fine court in Detroit where often the judge asks a corps of trained psychiatrists to tell him what is wrong with the man who keeps coming back again and again with a ticket for speeding through the business district, going through a stop light, making a U-turn on a busy highway, or crashing into other cars.

The following sentence taken from an address by Dr. Canty tells us most of what we need to know about the causes of our 37,000 deaths a year. As Canty said, "In one instance, an examination was ordered for a commercial driver who had been ticketed on more than 200 occasions. His operator's license had been suspended, he had been placed on probation, but continued to drive without a license."

What an indictment this is of the weakness and futility of some police courts! Did the judge really think that probation would interest in the slightest a man like that? Doubtless the kind judge did not want to take the man's means of livelihood away from him, but surely the people of Detroit had a right to be protected from his depredations. They had rights, too. More judges need to remember that our citizens have a right to be protected from the man who is a confirmed and habitual criminal and will never work at anything else.

Start of Trouble

As Dr. Candy said, much of the trouble starts when a man who should never drive is granted a license. Obviously, in large cities the men who grant licenses are not well qualified to examine into the fitness of prospective drivers, and they are not much interested in doing this. What has fascinated me is Dr. Canty's discovery that perhaps 11 per cent of traffic offenders are too feeble-minded to know what they are doing. One in 100 is so nearly insane that he ought to be in a mental hospital; and obviously, for the one man who is bad enough to be locked up, there are many at large who are so erratic, irrational, unyielding and unconforming that they will keep having bad accidents.

Besides these, Candy found a large number of persons who had been insane. They had been discharged and sent home, but obviously, from the way they behaved on the road, they were not yet safe drivers. Some of their old mental trouble had remained to plague them.

Rockland, Me.—(U.P.)—Edward Moran, insurance salesman, sold an accident policy to Thomas Lott just before closing time one afternoon. Next morning, Lott was hospitalized with a broken leg.

INCOMPLETE REPORT

Chicago —(U.P.)— A police informer performed perfectly in giving Detective Pat Tracy the code word which set off a vice raid Tuesday. But the tipster forgot to mention a large German shepherd dog in the raided flat. The dog took a nip out of Tracy's leg.
