Quotes From the News

By UNITED PRESS

El Centro, Calif.—Edgar Eisenhower on whether his brother, President Eisenhower, will run for the presidency again: "Knowing we Eisenhowers and knowing something of the way his (the President's) mind works, I believe he hasn't finished the job, and until he does finish that job he'll stay on as long as he can."

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—O. C. Carmichael, president of the University of Alabama, in appealing for law and order and an end to rioting in the crises over a Negro coed's enrollment: "The issue before the university is not segregation versus integration but law and order versus anarchy."

Pittsburgh—Mrs. Edith R. Phillips of Providence, R.I., on why she has not cashed bonds which matured 10 years ago worth more than $25,000 with interest: "Pshaw, Pittsburgh's not the only place that wants me to cash my bonds. I get lots of calls. But I'm a busy woman."

Niagara Falls, N.Y.—Coach Taps Gallagher on whether Niagara university will accept a basketball invitation to the National Invitation Tournament: "Well, we are an institution of higher learnings and things like that have to be considered carefully. But we've never turned one down."

Asheville, N.C.—Herman Banks, haled into police court, on why he doesn't know how many times he has been before the police magistrate: "My wife has had me up here so often that my dogs follow the patrol cruisers."

Passing By Lena Horne, scintillating sultry siren of song. Lena is scheduled to appear in a stage musical based on the career of the Queen of Sheba. That could be good. Might be quite interesting to see the Queen of Sheba and Solomon doing a song and dance.

Largest Prehistoric Pottery Jar Found

Los Angeles—(U.P.)—A University of California archaeologist has reported finding what may be the largest prehistoric pottery jar unearthed in the Americas. The king-sized jar was discovered in the Valley of Mexico by Dr. George Brainerd while on a UCLA expedition. The jar is believed to have been a storage facility or possible fermentation vessel for pulque an intoxicating beverage still brewed today. The jar is 30 inches high with a diameter of 23 inches, having a capacity of about 35 gallons. The vessel appears to have been buried in the floor of a Toltec house. The Toltecs conquered a large part of Mexico and Guatemala between 950 and 1200 A. D.

Longer Center Spans Predicted for Bridges

Fennville, Mich.—(U.P.)—Clifford E. Paine, who designed the Golden Gate bridge, predicts bridges with longer center spans than the famed San Francisco span will be built some day.

"Development of highways must keep pace with the increasing needs of automotive transportation," Paine said. "This will justify construction of bridges at many water barriers where in the past bridges were not feasible for economic reasons."

"Some of these crossings will require long-span bridges. These will be toll bridges. A few will be built where physical conditions require extremely long spans."

"At present, the longest span in existence is that of the Golden Gate bridge which has a central span of 4,200 feet," Paine said. "Longer spans can be built and undoubtedly will be."

Paine recently moved his engineering offices from San Francisco and Chicago to his native Fennville.

Louisiana Tackles Segregation Problem

New Orleans—(U.P.)—Louisiana geared for action on two fronts today to fight a federal court ruling that the state's segregation laws are invalid.

A joint legislative committee of the Legislature announced in Baton Rouge that it would study new legislation to counter the ruling while school officials attack it in the courts.

The legislative committee had already been considering possible laws to safeguard segregation in private as well as public schools when the ruling was made here Wednesday.

The Orleans Parish School Board, ordered by the court to end its segregation policy "with all deliberate speed," was expected to appeal.
