aries on their duties. The "Each One Teach One" refers to Dr. Frank Laubach's method of teaching the illiterate people in the Orient and elsewhere.

"Since today's biggest conflict is a war of ideas," Dr. Laubach says, "it is not enough merely to teach people to read. We must provide reading matter which will help them to help themselves and will increase their understanding of what freedom means. Without the ability to read, men huddle in a small tent of homemade opinions."

A typical Laubach team includes an artist and a linguist, and may have a typist and story writer, Miss Smith said. They enter a village and learn from leaders in the community the most useful, working vocabulary. The key words are represented on a chart by simple drawings of objects, and beside each is a letter. The illiterate pronounces the name of the object and automatically pronounces the letter. Dr. Laubach calls it a "visual pun," the speaker said. She continued:

"Who decides which is the best picture for the lessons? The illiterates do themselves. Every step in making the charts, in choosing the words, sentences, and simple stories is tested by trying it out with people of different ages, occupations, and ability to learn. When they are satisfied, the artist makes the final drawings for the charts. With good, associated pictures, and simple, interesting stories, an adult illiterate can finish a lesson in 20 minutes, and a primer in ten days or two weeks.

"Dr. Laubach's needs for teachers is solved through his 'Each One Teach One' method, a cheap, effective way to learn, which aids both teacher and learner.

"Dr. Laubach's simplified version of the story of Jesus, in 12 booklets, has been adapted in more than 40 languages.

"When the illiterate becomes literate, when the 'nobody' becomes somebody, what will he read? From the Literacy House in Allahabad, "tin trunk libraries" (really tin suitcases) are sent to villages where literacy demands are growing. Hundreds of helpful booklets have been selected for village use. They have been tested on old and young. A man may bring the "tin trunk library" on his bicycle, or make a tour of villages with the station wagon. Upon arrival he will open the "library" and begin reading to whet appetites. One of the villages may offer a room for the books. With the aid of a kerosene lantern many a tired villager gets refreshment, information, and courage to make for himself and his community a better life."

Refreshments were served by Mesdames Florence Allen, Dorthea Bushnell, Eugenia Carson, Frances Klein, and Ethel Reid.

KIDS IS THE CRAZIEST PEOPLE!

Kids have the goldarnest amount of energy. They play hard...learn fast...sleep soundly...grow like weeds.

How do they do it? They've got the advantage of being more recent models, of course—newer body styles and all that. But a large part of the answer lies in the fuel they run around on.

Milk's their petrol, and it's pretty hard to beat. Loaded with VCP (vitamins, calcium, protein), milk gives them mileage like you haven't gotten since you were a kid.
