The Medical Roundup

by Walter Alvarez

Emeritus Consultant in Medicine, Mayo Clinic
Emeritus Professor of Medicine, Mayo Foundation

Dry Skin and Hair

When persons ask me why they have such dry skin and hair I ask them if they feel too cold, if they go to sleep in their chair, or if they feel slowed-up and dopey, or if they feel as if they were thinking through a veil. Such persons ought always to have one or two tests made of their basal metabolic rate because they may lack sufficient activity in their thyroid gland. If the test of the basal metabolic rate shows that their body chemistry is down more than 20 per cent, they may be greatly helped by taking some thyroid substance (under the direction of a physician). They must not take enough to produce jitteriness that might injure the heart.

Walter Alvarez

Some people have an abnormally dry skin all their days. They have inherited it from some ancestor. We physicians call this trouble ichthyosis or fish skin. I remember a family in which several members had a dry, wrinkled, scaly skin that looked something like the cast-off skin of a snake. About all such people can do is, each day, to rub some oil or cold cream into their skin, especially after bathing. The rubbing of oil or fat into the skin can cut down on the itching that grandfather feels in his shins at night. It is curious, but the first day in October or November when the weather turns sharply cold, the skin-itchiness of older people starts up. The oil-producing glands in their skin are not active enough.

Large Head Full of Fluid

Some babies develop a large head which is due to the retention of an abnormal amount of fluid in the spaces inside the brain. In these children the normal balance between the formation and the removal of the fluid is disturbed. In some cases the condition rights itself after a time so that the child can go on living, and without too much injury to his brain. In other cases the head keeps getting bigger and bigger; more of the brain is injured and the child's mentality has to suffer.

Some years ago an operation was designed with the idea of helping these children. Obviously, all children whose head is getting too big should be seen quickly by a good children's specialist and a good brain surgeon to see if anything curative can be done.

Dr. Alvarez regrets he hasn't the time in which to read and answer requests for information.

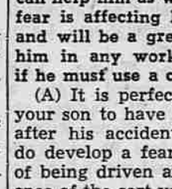
As We Live

By ELIZABETH HURLOCK, PH.D.

Son Needs To Regain Driving Confidence

There is no question about the facts that accidents teach people to be cautious more quickly and effectively than anything else. They can, however, build up fears which prove to be a great handicap.



Dr. Hurlock

(Q) "I was very much interested in your recent column about the mother whose teen-age children were constantly criticizing her for driving so slowly and cautiously. My teen-age son used to do the same with me. When he was old enough to get a driver's license, he drove like a madman. The more his father and I talked to him about this, the faster and more recklessly he drove. He seemed to want to show me that he wasn't afraid, as I am.

Well, as was inevitable, he had a bad accident, broke a leg, lost several teeth, and had some pretty bad cuts on his face. Fortunatel,y he wasn't killed nor was the girl who was driving with him badly hurt. Since then, he is so afraid of cars that he uses every possible excuse to avoid driving. This is a great handicap to him on dates as no girl wants to go to a party or even the movies unless the boy drives her there.

"The boys make fun of him for being a 'chicken' and it is giving him a bad inferiority complex. The accident happened nearly a year ago and he seems to be getting worse, rather than better. Is there any way we can help him as we feel that this fear is affecting his schoolwork and will be a great handicap to him in any work he goes into if he musf use a car." —W.P.

(A) It is perfectly natural for your son to have a fear-complex after his accident. Most people do develop a fear of driving or of being driven after an experience of the sort your son had. In his case, the matter has been worse because he unquestionably knows he was at fault and this has undermined his confidence in his ability to drive.

In modern times, it is almost essential for people to drive unless they live in large cities where good public transportation is available. In your son's case, he will be greatly handicapped if he allows this fear to get such a hold on him that he will never want to drive again. Why not talk to him about profiting by his mistake, and then drive with him until he regains some of his former confidence? It may take months but it is the only way he will be able to conquer his fear.

Salem—(U.P.)—The State Board of Control has decided to sell a wooden water wheel and generator at the state prison as surplus equipment.

Unwelcome Object Plagues Air Base

Altus, Okla. —(U.P.)— Officials at Altus Air Force base have an unwelcome object to which they wish they could attach a propeller and wave goodbye.

But the object—a 100-foot tall concrete tower—stands firm on its foundation. The space occupied by the tower is needed for future construction work.

The main headache faced by army engineers and base air installation crews is the fact that the tower can't be merely knocked over, because it would fall on a gymnasium under construction.

No wrecking companies will undertake to do the job, nor will insurance companies issue a policy covering damage to surrounding structures.

Navy Hospital Wants Old Postage Stamps

San Diego —(U.P.)— Any old postage stamps lying around your house?

The U. S. Navy Hospital Stamp club here can use them—in any amount. Its address is: Building 7, U. S. Navy Hospital San Diego 34, Calif.

Doctors there say tha recovery is speeded among men who collect stamps, and that, in some cases, stamp collecting actually has saved lives by getting a wounded man's mind off his troubles.

J. L. Zerbe, a retired University of Pennsylvania professor, is president of the stamp club at the hospital. He never before had any connection with any of the armed services, but he devotes a good many hours each week to instructing embryonic collectors there in how to classify, catalogue and mount stamps in their collections.
