

Rural Fire District Sets Election Date

Central Point—Central Point Rural Fire Protection district board has set Tuesday, March 20, as date for a special election on a proposal to exceed the 6 per cent and four mill limitations in the 1956-1957 district budget by $6,972.80.

Total amount to be levied is $31,647.48, which is $259.52 less than the $31,907 budget for the current fiscal year. The amount will be used to operate two fire stations and to maintain all present services.

Board members and budget committee members stated that they felt that the spending of the district should be held down this year although there are improvements which are needed.

Polls will be open from 2 to 8 p.m. at the fire hall here. All registered voters of the district may cast ballots in the special election. Also any registered voter of Oregon who owns property in the district may vote. Corporations who own property in the district may participate in the election.

SCIENCE AT WORK

New York — (U.P.) — An unsolved problem of the science of the mind is that of "time orientation" in human beings and what it means.

Some of us live more or less entirely in the present; others live partly in the present but project their expectations far into the future. That is "time orientation."

Two psychologists of Michigan State College have investigated "time orientation" in delinquent boys and found that they were conspicuous present-livers without much thought for future rewards and punishments.

"We can conclude that short time perspective is part of the pattern of delinquency," said Robert J. Barnet and Donald M. Johnson. "But we cannot say which is cause and which is effect. So little is known about the development of time orientation that speculation is hardly profitable."

Previous investigators had outlined the phenomenon. Dr. L. Schneider and S. Lygaard indicated the existence of a "deferred gratification pattern" in middle class families which saved regularly and carefully and sought to learn and store information, thinking of a payoff in the future.

Childhood Training

But Drs. A. Davis and K. Dollard reported that in the lower class boy "the long-range goals do not seem to be 'there' in his world. He does not see other people in his class attaining them, or practicing the behavior required of him, and he feels his parents and teachers are 'crazy' when they demand it of him."

Barnet and Johnson pointed out, in a report to the American Psychological Association, that an "active, imaginative human being" makes his mental and emotional environment, and so the part time plays in that environment "takes on considerable importance."

They cited psychological authority for a belief that a person who feels a goal he wishes to achieve can really be achieved, probably will be oriented toward the future, but if he thinks the goal is beyond his reach, he will live in the present.

"This orientation toward the future is acquired, of course, by incidental learning during childhood and adolescence," they added. "Hence the different family atmospheres typical of different social classes would be expected to produce different time orientations."

Crime Stories

They took 26 habitually delinquent boys in a Michigan reform school and matched them for age, intelligence and scholastic attainment with 26 boys from a high school. To each boy, either Barnet or Johnson said:

"About three o'clock one bright, sunny afternoon in May two boys were walking along a street near the edge of town . . . Now you start there and finish the story any way you want to."

The stories of the delinquent boys were confined, in the main to the immediate present. Those of the high school boys took in the future for the most part. That means something, said the scientists; what it means, they couldn't say, but they want science to look into the meanings of time orientations thoroughly.

They found out one other thing which was pathetic.

"Of the 26 subjects in the delinquent group, 15 produced stories with crime themes or unhappy endings. In the control group of 26 stories, there was only one crime theme and three others with unhappy outcomes."

Medford Students Elected to Posts

Corvallis — Dorothy Rhymes and Bruce Parker of Medford have been elected to posts in resident houses at Oregon State college.

Miss Rhymes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Burnett W. Rhymes, 1715 Crown ave., Medford, was elected vice president of Sackett D, which is one of four separate living units in the hall which houses more than 300 women. She is a freshman majoring in business administration.

Parker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey W. Parker, 1467 South Stage rd., Medford, is the new house manager of Phi Kappa Psi, national social fraternity.

Comfort Sought in Oregon Police Uniforms

Salem — (U.P.) — Oregon's state police have decided comfort is more important than looks when it comes to summer uniforms.

H. G. Maison, superintendent of state police, said today that officers would abandon their highly polished boots and heavy breeches this summer in favor of trousers and shoes which are more comfortable.

Maison said the move would also save money as trousers cost less than breeches and the boots could be saved exclusively for winter wear.

Around Hollywood

Hollywood — (U.P.) — A dark-haired, big-eyed boy named Sal Mineo has one big hope: To break the Oscar jinx against juveniles winning an award.

Sal is only 17. He got the biggest surprise of his life—and so did Hollywood when he passed up older actors and snared a supporting actor Oscar nomination for playing Jimmy Dean's pal in "Rebel Without a Cause."

"The Bronx is in an uproar!" grinned the youthful New York actor today. "Sure, I hope to win. I don't know why young people aren't often nominated—except they don't often get top roles."

Long Tradition Confronted

Sal has a long tradition to break. Mickey Rooney was nominated for an Oscar in 1939, Jackie Cooper in 1931, Bonita Granville in 1936, Ann Blyth in 1945 and Brandon de Wilde in 1953. Not one of these juveniles won the Oscar. If Sal wins, he'll be the youngest victor in Oscar history.

To make up for the jinx, the academy's board of governors down the years has voted special awards to young thespians.

"But I'd rather be nominated among the older actors and lose than get a special award as a minor," Mineo said.

Sal was a dark horse in the Oscar race. He wasn't even invited as a possible nominee to the telecast where the nominations were announced. He heard about the honor at the home of Universal-International Studio's school teacher where he lives when working in Hollywood. Dinner Spilled on Floor

"We were eating dinner and we tuned in on the nominations," he said. "When they called my name I hollered 'Oh, no! I was so excited I dropped my dinner on the floor.'"

Sal still has a welfare worker chaperoning him on the set. He's in his last year of high school at the MGM school. Next year he hopes to enter Columbia University.

"Who shall I take to the Oscar award ceremony? Anita Ekberg?" he speculated. "I'll have to rent a tuxedo."

Japanese Educators To See Oregon Education

Salem — (U.P.) — Two Japanese educators and an interviewer were scheduled to arrive here today to observe public education in the Salem area.

D. A. Emerson, deputy superintendent of public instruction, said the visitors—Katusuo Orito and Hidetsugu Hisano — were sponsored by the committee on the leaders program of the American Council on Education.
