Grace Kelly Leaves Decisions Up to Fiance Prince Rainier

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press Writer
Hollywood, Calif. — (U.P.) — Grace Kelly said today there will be only one boss in the royal family of Monaco—Prince Rainier III.

The blonde movie queen already is leaving decisions to her fiance, conforming to the tractable life of most European wives.

Curled up on a couch in her studio dressing room, the future princess of Monaco said she hoped to make another movie at MGM after she is married.

"Plans are pretty well settled for me to make 'Designing Woman,' here sometime before the year is out," she explained. "But I don't know just when."

Informed that Rainier had told New York newsmen she would not make movies after their marriage, Miss Kelly flushed. "Whatever he says is fine with me," she smiled. "I respect his judgment."

Dressed in dungarees and plaid shirt, Miss Kelly confided she will be a "working" princess, taking part in state ceremonies and official functions of the tiny principality.

"I am told there will be many official duties required of me," she said. "Certainly there will be visiting dignitaries to entertain. And I will have to learn about protocol and other customs."

Affairs Of State
"We will spend most of our time in Monaco attending to affairs of state, I understand. I've only been there twice in my life, so there is much for me to see and learn."

Asked about her immediate plans, Miss Kelly said, "I'm just living from day to day—not looking too far ahead."

"I will stay in Hollywood until Academy Award night, March 21, to present this year's best actor with an Oscar. My work here in 'High Society' is over this week, and I should be leaving right away. But I feel I should stay here for the awards."

"Right after that I'll fly to New York for about 10 days to take care of all the little things for the wedding. There are nine zillion details to clear up."

"There's shopping to do, bridesmaids gowns to pick out, friends and relatives to visit. And there's very little time for any of it."

Miss Kelly sails with her family April 4 from New York

Artist Wins Award

Eugene Bennett, Medford artist now teaching in New Trier High school in Winnetka, Ill., was one of 24 artists who received prizes in the 59th annual exhibition of the Art Institute of Chicago which opened in Chicago this week. A total of 2077 works were submitted, the jury selecting 203 for exhibition.

A release from the institute states that young Bennett was awarded the Pauline Palmer prize of $300 for his oil painting, "Notre Dame." The artist traveled and worked in Europe for a year before returning to the faculty of the New Trier school last fall.

A native Oregonian, the artist has had his works exhibited in the Portland Art Museum, the Brooklyn Museum and the Chicago institute.

The award winning picture is of the facade of the Paris cathedral in a many-faceted abstract pattern in colors found in the stained glass windows. The painting retains the mood as well as something of the architectural semblance of the ancient cathedral, the release states.

Mr. Bennett attended Medford schools and the University of Oregon and is a veteran of World War II. He has conducted summer classes in Medford, and has exhibited in southern Oregon shows, as well as holding one-man shows here in Medford, and has exhibited in southern Oregon shows, as well as holding one-man shows here in Medford.

Judges for the show were Hedda Sterne, whose paintings are in many important American collections; Ibram Lassaw, whose sculpture has gained him great recognition, and Gordon Bailey Washburn, director of the Department of Fine Arts at Carnegie Institute in Pittsburgh.

Noted Man To Speak In Medford

Dr. H. Corwin Hinshaw, who is to be guest speaker at the annual meeting March 15 of Jackson County Public Health association, is reputed to be one of the outstanding experts in the United States on diseases of the chest.

The annual event, at which Dr. Hinshaw will speak on health subjects of interest both to physicians and the general public, will be held in the Pioneer room of the Jackson hotel, Thursday, March 15 at noon.

His topic will be "The Prevention of Chronic Disease." Dr. Hinshaw has been clinical professor of medicine, Stanford University School of Medicine, and head of the San Francisco, California, Division of Diseases of the Chest, since 1949.

From 1933 to 1949, Dr. Hinshaw was associated with the Mayo Clinic, first as fellow in medicine, and then as consulting physician and head of a section in medicine.

He was president of the American Trudeau society from 1948 to 1949. The Trudeau society is the professional counterpart of the National Tuberculosis association. It was founded by Dr. Trudeau, who recognized the need for a special organization to combat tuberculosis.

Dr. Hinshaw holds a doctor of philosophy degree from the University of California, a medical degree from the University of Pennsylvania and an honorary degree from the College of Idaho.

Mrs. Henry Padgham, president of the association, stresses the desirability of making reservations for the luncheon early. Because of Dr. Hinshaw's outstanding qualities as a speaker, a large public demand for reservations is anticipated.
