Red China Displaying US Weather Balloons

Tokyo — (U.P.) — Communist China is displaying six U. S weather balloons equipped with cameras, according to Kyodo News Service.

Kyodo said a Red Chinese official told its Peiping correspondent that the plastic balloons floated over China from the south.

The balloons carried dry cell batteries, iron filing ballast and a camera with two lenses capable of taking two photographs at once, the dispatch said.

A new cold record for the U.S. was set Jan. 20, 1954 at Rogers Pass, Mont., north of Yellowstone national park, when the mercury fell to 70 degrees below zero.

Lowest annual mean temperatue in the U.S. is 26.8 degrees at Mt. Washington in New Hampshire, a record held for the past 10 years.

No Cure for Scattered Cancer

When, as so commonly happens, a man tells me that if a great medicine were to be found by a layman we doctors would not use it, I tell him what is true: That we have always obtained most of our drugs from laymen. Let us take for example the sulfa drugs. The first one was discovered by a chemist in Europe. The day we doctors learned of its great usefulness, we began to prescribe it, and soon physicians all over the world started begging for it. Similarly, penicillin was discovered, not by a practicing physician, but by a bacteriologist working in his little laboratory. As soon as the substance was purified and tested and made available commercially, every physician in the world was prescribing it, and it had to be made in huge quantities.

Walter Alvarez

Recently a drug manufacturer heard that there was something curative in a snake root remedy used for centuries in India. His chemists worked with it until they got out the essential substance, and within a few months this was being used by doctors all over the world as one of their favorite drugs. I could go on to show how most of the drugs we physicians have grabbed onto quickly in the past have come from men who never practiced medicine.

Long Delay Crazy Idea

Another crazy idea people have is that if a quack somewhere were to discover a cure for cancer it might be years before it was investigated by the medical profession or by the Government and recognized as valuable. This again, is silly. When sick people start flocking to a quack or anyone anywhere, several investigators for different medical and government groups go immediately to see if the fellow has anything. For instance; years ago when two perfectly honest and reputable American doctors thought they had found the cure for cancer, and started giving it for nothing to the people who came by the hundreds to consult them, the Mayo Clinic sent one of the ablest members of its staff to see if the new medicine was curing anyone. In a few weeks he returned sadly to say that he had not seen any cures. Soon after that the crowds of patients also became discouraged and went home.

Standing Award

The U.S. Health authorities have long had a standing award to be given to anyone who will show them he has a cure for cancer. So far as I know only one man has gone to Washington to claim it, and he soon showed that he had nothing.

Another thing that very few laymen know today is that a man who thinks he has a cure for scattered cancer (and it is only a cure for scattered cancer that the world wants) no longer has to wait a year or two to see if it works on men and women. He can have it tried on a hundred mice with cancer, and in this way he can know in a few weeks if he has something hopeful or good, or nothing at all.

Finally, there have always been a few sure tests that will reveal the man whom all persons will do well to avoid. Often, he advertises; he always keeps his "remedy" secret; he always exacts a big fee in advance; in every case he diagnoses cancer; he guarantees a cure, but when the patient dies he says it was because not enough of the medicine was taken; hence he never returns the money.

The amazing part of this is that it all happened before the invention of filter tip cigarettes.

Monaco Port Goal of Navies During Wedding

Monte Carlo, Monaco—(U.P.)—Warships from the American, British, French and Italian navies are expected to make this a port of call during the Prince Rainier-Grace Kelly wedding, informed sources said today.

Yachtsmen and Italian businessmen also have asked permission to drop anchor here during the wedding, port authorities said.

Argentine Atomic Project Said Failure

Buenos Aires — (U.P.) — Government investigators blamed a former nazi aircraft designer Wednesday for a multi-million-dollar atomic fiasco during the regime of ousted dictator Juan D. Peron.

A report said Prof. Kurt Wilhelm Tank, former Focke-Wulfe designer, "used his prestige as aircraft builder to help his fellow adventurer, the pseudo atomic scientist Ronald Richter of Austria, to impress Peron."

The report said Richter's claim of achieving a chain reaction from a reactor he built was false. The project was a complete failure, it said.

The drainage basin of the Amazon river in South America is equal to five-sixths of the United States.

British City Objects To Salk Vaccine Plan

Burton-on-Trent, England — (U.P.) — This city, which was one of the hardest hit during a polio epidemic four years ago, decided today to boycott the nation's plan to vaccinate children against polio.

City officials said the decision was taken "because of the minister of health's cock-eyed method of organizing vaccination."

They said the ministry asked local officials to collect names of children whose parents agreed to the inoculation, but there is only enough of the British-developed Salk-type vaccine for one child in five.

Mosquitoes were unknown to Hawaii until about 1893.
