MEDFORD (OREGON) MAIL TRIBUNE—THREE

In Medford's Schools

HEDRICK JUNIOR HIGH

On Friday, March 2, Claude Haggard, safety director of the California Oregon Power company, presented an interesting and educational lecture on electricity. The lecture was illustrated by slides and actual demonstrations. He proved electricity, though dangerous, can be handled safely if proper precautions are observed.

On March 9 the speech department of Hedrick Junior High school under the instruction of Jerome McDougall presented an assembly. Proceeds from ticket sales will be used to help defray expenses of the trip to the Linfield speech contest.

Mary LaBar gave the oration which won second place at Linfield; Bert Simmons and Roddy Craig debated the topic of "Conservation of Air;" Ted Lawson gave a serious reading with which he placed second, and Jeff Barnes gave a humorous reading.

McDougall gave a humorous interpretation of Edgar Allan Poe's poem, "The Raven" using vocal punctuation marks.

Miss Wheaton told the students about the baby sitting course which begins March 12. A short skit presented by John Frohnmayer and Judy Lambert proved that everyone can benefit by attending the course.

The City Council of PTA is going all out to give students an opportunity to take beneficial courses. Such a course beginning March 12 will be sponsored by the citizens of Medford through the City Council of PTA. The course will be given at Hedrick Junior High first, then at McLoughlin Junior High, and finally at the Medford High school.

It will benefit baby sitters and students who would like to baby sit. At the end of the five sessions all the students who have attended and completed the requirements will receive a certificate.

Their names will be placed on a preferred list in the office. When people call the school inquiring about babysitters, the names of the students having completed the requirements will be given.

The sessions will be held in the cafeteria. There will be a different speaker at each session.

The program opened with four numbers each by the Jackson school band and orchestra. Jerry Piland, a sixth grade student, was the narrator.

The pageant was well received by a capacity audience of parents and friends of the school.
