

Welfare Workers Ask for Materials

Used clothing and material for quilts are needed by Valley View Seventh-Day Adventist church welfare workers, according to Mrs. Will Darby, leader, of Route 1, Medford. Anyone who has articles to donate may call Mrs. Darby at telephone 3-3797, for pickup service.

Because of recent emergency calls for flood victims a great deal of bedding and clothing was given by the workers and supplies were depleted, the leader pointed out.

Members of the church have also contributed to their famine and disaster fund and Seventh-Day Adventists across the country have been asked to give over a million dollars to have on hand to aid needy persons.

The services are being arranged so that workers in the downtown area may take advantage of the brief devotional period during the week.

Ministers and musicians from various churches in the city will participate. The public is invited.

Teaching Driving Virtues in Church

Led by the board of education of the Methodist church, a number of churches and church agencies are now reminding their congregations and their young people of the necessity of "good driving habits" as a Christian virtue.

"Careful driving conserves human life, and it again places emphasis on the value of the individual—both important from the viewpoint of Christian teaching," notes one leader. The Methodist board is placing a series of lessons on the courtesies and safety of driving in some of its church school publications, emphasizing the Christian values involved.
