

Buried Treasure

by Pinkney Gage

Making Own Ammo For Smith Shotgun

There was nothing in the place either of us wanted, apparently, and I was already half way to the door when I heard Charley ask to see the gun in the corner.

"That for sale, too?" he asked, and the incredulous note in his voice swung me around fast.

"Sure is," the owner said, "but you can't buy ammunition for that. I haven't seen any for years."

There was good reason why. The gun was an eight gauge shotgun. I had used a ten but never even seen an eight before.

"Why it's an L. C. Smith," Charley said, studying the engraving on the barrels, "and it balances beautifully."

It did, too. Though the weapon weighed a fraction over 14 pounds, its 38-inch barrels swung easily on an imaginary target. The stock was a magnificent piece of Circassian walnut. Its beauty and the restrained nature of the engraving on the steel told me instantly that here

FORGOTTEN STAMP IN WALLET STARTS BOY ON HOBBY

"I didn't know you people were stamp collectors," I said, picking up a Liberian air mail stamp from the floor.

"We aren't," said Jane, and then, with a quick look at the olive-green oblong, "I gave that to Willie this morning. I had found it in an old pocketbook of Jack's I threw out. It was one he had while stationed in Monrovia just before the war."

"It looks as if Willie didn't think much of it," I said, laying the stamp on the table.

Jane didn't have a chance to answer me. At that moment Willie burst into the room.

"Where's that stamp you gave me, Mom. I can't find it anywhere."

Jane looked calmly at her nine-year-old son and started to admonish him about being scatter-brained.

"Okay, Mom," he said. "Okay! But this is important. I've got

NEW CONSTRUCTION UNEARTHS 1849 $10 OREGON COIN

"It's a deal," Frank said, giving me a wink and going to the safe, "I'll take it, but how did you happen to get the coin?"

"Well," said the seller, a rather distinguished looking man in a well cut suit of banker's gray. "I got it because of my extraordinary ability and years of practice as a sidewalk superintendent."

"It was about two years ago when they were excavating the foundations of a new building right on the edge of what used to be San Francisco's Barbary Coast."

"I was on my way to call on a client, but my attention for a few minutes of intensive superintending was too good to pass up. It was a small job, but they hadn't erected a board fence as they do on the bigger ones, so I just stood there watching them load dirt and rock into the dump-truck."

"Well, while I was standing
