Officials Keeping Watchful Eye on Turkey Disease

Portland—(U.P.)—State agricultural officials are fearful that the pneumonia-like disease, psittacosis, which has hit two northern Oregon turkey flocks may be spread along both sides of the Columbia river by migratory waterfowl.

J. F. Short, Oregon director of agriculture, has taken emergency measures aimed at preventing the spread of the disease which has infected turkey flocks at Sauvie island and at Scappoose and also contributed to the death of two persons.

Dr. E. M. Dickinson, chief of the Oregon State College veterinary school, said Saturday that his department is "very much concerned" over the possibility of further outbreaks. "We are grateful, however, that the infected flocks are isolated from the great bulk of Oregon's turkey population," Dr. Dickinson said.

Embargo Ordered

State of Washington officials have slapped an embargo on all turkey eggs and poult from the state of Oregon. Washington officials have demanded that destruction of the entire flocks where the outbreak of the disease was found as the price for lifting the embargo.

Oregon authorities have balked at the idea of destroying the entire flocks, saying that it would amount to taking away 12 months income from the growers. "They are foundation birds for breeding stock and not for market. The 6000 birds involved in the Scappoose area are not just ordinary turkeys," Short said.

Lieutenant Governor Ballot Title Readied

Salem—(U.P.)—A ballot title and descriptive summary of the lieutenant governor bill was prepared today by Attorney General Robert Y. Thornton.

Purpose of the bill would be to "create the office of lieutenant governor," according to the title.

"Qualifications shall be the same as for governor," the title continues, "with duties assigned by law or by governor. Lieutenant governor shall preside over the Senate and may succeed to vacancy created in office of governor."

The initiative measure would create the office by amending article five of the Oregon Constitution and would make the lieutenant governor rather than the president of the Senate first in line to succeed the governor in case of vacancy.

A key and controversial feature of the bill would be that the lieutenant governor would preside over the state Senate with the right to cast a tie-breaking vote except upon final passage of bills and joint resolutions.

Alabama Negroes Go on Trial for Boycott of Buses

Montgomery, Ala.—(U.P.)—Ninety-three Montgomery Negroes went on trial today on charges of violating a state law by leading a city-wide racial boycott of the city's segregated buses.

The Negroes were cited as leaders of the highly successful 15 week movement of "passive resistance" to Jim Crow practices on the city bus lines.

They protested crowded seating "behind the rail" while seats in the section reserved for whites remain empty. The leaders were indicted under a little-used "labor" law making conspiracy to boycott a misdemeanor.

Reporters on Hand

A battery of five Negro lawyers defended the leaders before Circuit Judge Eugene Cater in a century-old courthouse scheduled to be torn down next month. Reporters were on hand from London, Paris and big U.S. cities.

Young Fred Gray, leading the defense, and Solicitor William F. Thetford, held separate strategy meetings on the eve of the trials. The defense could ask for a separate trial of each Negro. Jury trial was waived.

The Negroes were indicted Feb. 21 under a 1921 law providing six-month jail terms, $1,000 fines or both for conspiring to organize an economic boycott.

Must Rule on Violation

Judge Carter first had to rule on defense charges that the law violates the constitutional rights of free speech, worship and assembly.

Dr. M. L. King, 27-year-old Negro minister arrested as leader of the boycott, told some 1,000 Negroes at a prayer meeting Sunday night that their race has gained a "new sense of dignity and destiny" through their boycott.
