Sno-Cats Subject of Article in Magazine

The Tucker Sno-Cat, manufactured in Medford by Tucker Sno-Cat corporation, is the subject of an article in the February-March issue of Du Pont magazine.

The article describes the vehicle as "brain child of an American inventor whose formal schooling ended in the fifth grade," which "will be helping scientists of many lands explore the snow bound wastes of the Antarctic during the next few years."

Emmit M. Tucker, president of the corporation, experimenting for 40 years with spiral-drive vehicles and rubber-coated tracks before coming up with the Sno-Cat, according to the article. "Twenty or more of these rugged vehicles will be used by American, British, French and Australian expeditions in the extensive Antarctic exploration planned as part of the 1957-58 International Geophysical year," the article said.

Garden Notes

By C. B. CORDY
County Extension Agent for Horticulture

The next two weeks will be an excellent time in which to plant shade trees. As these shade trees will grow for a great many years, considerable care should be exercised in the choice of a tree which will be satisfactory.

As any large tree will uproot sidewalks and other cement structures, they should not be planted within 10 feet of concrete work. If a tree must be planted near concrete work, select a small one which will not uproot it.

Some trees such as willow, maple and sycamore have many surface roots so are undesirable if it is desired to grow flowers or shrubs close to them. Poplar and cottonwood trees, in many cases, will send up large numbers of root suckers.

Building Hazard
These trees also get very large and eventually will be a hazard to nearby buildings. These trees should never be planted in urban areas and will eventually prove unsatisfactory in most rural areas.

Silver maple and sycamore are fast growing, large spreading trees with shallow root systems. Sweet gum and tulip trees are large pyramidal trees with deeper root systems. Satisfactory small trees would be horsechestnut, purple leaf plum, hawthorn and flowering cherry.

Elm trees should be avoided unless the home owner is willing to face the probable necessity of an annual spray for the control of aphid and leaf beetle. There are a large number of satisfactory evergreen trees, but large forest trees such as pine and douglas fir should be avoided in town as these become too large and are a hazard to surrounding buildings.
