Circuit Court Rooms Major Annex Job Left

Completion of the circuit court rooms on the courthouse annex third floor is the only remaining major project before construction and remodeling of the courthouse and annex are finished.

County court members said yesterday final adjustments concerning the annex are being made with Architect Ben Todd and that the construction contract is practically fulfilled.

A small remodeling job in the old district court office, which will house part of the county health department, will also be completed soon.

Construction of the annex was begun in June, 1954, and the first offices moved into the new addition in August, 1955.

The project will cost the county an estimated $418,500, plus $50,000 for architectural fees and furnishings, according to an earlier report from the court.

Southern Oregon pears will be featured on a "Coast to Coast Cookup" food festival in Pelham, N.Y., according to a report from the Rogue Valley Traffic association.
