South Worried About Desegregation; Third Party Drive Waits Leadership

By AL KUETTNER
United Press Correspondent
Charleston, S. C.—(U.P.)—The deep South is gravely worried about desegregation and the two big political parties would desperately like to gauge the impact it will have on them this election year.

I have just completed a 3600-mile automobile tour of Dixie, talking with scores of whites and Negroes. Everywhere I went, segregation was the turning political issue.

There has been much speculation that another third party might emerge out of the controversy as it did in 1948 when South Carolina's J. Strom Thurmond carried four states on a states' rights ticket.

As of this moment, the third party balloon seems to be securely anchored to the ground. The only thing that could send it aloft is leadership. And leadership is lacking.

There is a very large and determined segment of the white South's population that could make third party material. It is the strongly conservative group whose members make up the White Citizens' Councils and kindred groups.

In talks with these people, plus governors and political experts of both parties, just about everyone agrees there is no central leadership of the kind needed to get a new political engine on the rails.

Not even the recent manifesto on segregation issued by southern congressmen was sufficient to bring various pro-segregation elements together. I heard complaints that political leaders waited to see how public opinion was going and "then ran out in front to lead us where we already had decided to go."

You'll hear names of prospective third party candidates.

Names like Sen. James O. Eastland of Mississippi (mostly in Mississippi) and Sen. Richard B. Russell of Georgia, who unsuccessfully sought the 1952 Democratic nod. He said he isn't in it this year.

A Citizens Council leader tossed out the name of J. Edgar Hoover.

The way the South reacts to this year's election will depend largely on the kind of platforms the parties adopt.

It seems pretty sure there will be some kind of walkout at the Democratic convention if liberal elements put across a civil rights platform stronger than a general endorsement in principle.

Tempers are taut right now. South Carolina Democrats, for example, decided to recess their state convention until after the national convention to allow for late action if the platform doesn't suit them.

Should there be a major walkout on the civil rights issue, it's anybody's guess as to what the South will do at the polls. Without a third party, a big stay-at-home protest would be likely.

If the stay-at-homes were mainly Democrats, the Republicans might capitalize on the situation to make further inroads in the South.

As a states' rights put it to me in Jackson, Miss.:

"All the big civil rights factions are on the Democratic side. If I were running the Republican party, I'd write a platform that was strong for guarantees of state sovereignty and weak on the civil rights issue. I'd sell that platform to the South and watch the votes roll in."

Quotes From the News

By UNITED PRESS
London—W. R. Rees-Davies, Conservative member of Parliament, on the Middle East situation:
"There is every likelihood of an outbreak of war involving the Arabs and Jews within the next two months."

Washington—The U.S. Information agency on "equality for women" in the Soviet Union:
"True to their principal of 'equality', women labor in steel mills, lumber camps and mines, and on railroads. They work as hod carriers on construction jobs, as street cleaners, loggers, stokers, machinists, truck drivers, carpenters and so forth."

Los Angeles—Narcotics Inspector Matthew M. O'Connor on a giant narcotics raid, possibly one of the largest in the nation's history, which netted 147 suspected peddlers:
"The panic is on because the peddlers are not available to the users."

Washington—Senate Republican Leader William F. Knowland on the 1956 GOP ticket:
"My judgment is that the Republican ticket is apt to be the same as it was in 1952."

Washington—F. Joseph Donohue, campaign manager for Sen. Estes Kefauver, on the "neutrality" of Democratic National Chairman Paul M. Butler:
"I'm afraid he's been so neutral, that he's leaning over backward for Stevenson."

Washington—Sen. John C. Stennis (D-Miss.) on the South's threat to abolish public schools rather than carry out the Supreme court's racial integration order:
"I couldn't express too strongly that great areas of the south are not going to surrender their social pattern."

Atlanta—Neville Bennet, South Carolina Democratic state chairman, on the Democratic National convention:
"We are very anxious to solve our problems and are going to Chicago in good faith."

Miami—Dr. George Polis, one of three vacationing interns, on their being warned from a passing motorist that one of them might die from exposure to spinal meningitis:
"It's a strange feeling to have a passing motorist tell you that one of you is going to die if you don't get to a doctor."

Precincts 1 to 84, Kathleen Bash, 1325 Bundy st., Medford; Donna V. Straus, Sams Valley; and Pauline LaPlane, Labor Temple, Medford.

Mrs. Bash and Mrs. Straus also can register voters at Republican and Democratic headquarters, respectively.

The county clerk warned that registration records are permanent only if residents continue to live in the same precinct and vote in at least one election held throughout the county within the two years ending Nov. 30 following the regular biennial general election.

Reregistration is required if a voter moves to another precinct, changes a name by marriage or other reason, if registration has been cancelled for non-voting, or if a change in party is desired.

The clerk's office will remain open until 8 p.m. April 17.

Kefauver To Dodge Disparaging Words During Campaign

Los Angeles — (U.P.) — Sen. Estes Kefauver marshaled forces today for a "healthy primary fight," with Adlai Stevenson who cancelled his Florida vacation to fly to California.

"Healthy primary fights will only strengthen the party," Kefauver said yesterday.

The Tennessee senator, who upset Stevenson in the Minnesota primary, said he did not want any "acrimonious campaigns," and declared he did not believe in "disparaging words" which might split the Democratic party.

Many Good Men

Kefauver said "I have high respect for Mr. Stevenson. I am not going to have any disparaging words to say about him during these primary campaigns. He is a fine man who would make a good President. We have many good men in the Democratic party."

Kefauver said there were "a lot of people," hoping a bad split would develop among Democrats from his primary battles with Stevenson.

"Healthy primary fights will only strengthen the party," Kefauver said. "They create interest. I don't want them to be acrimonious campaigns. I want to discuss the issues and this will be a good thing for the Democratic party."

Fee Established For Registered Voter Lists Here

A fee of one cent per name has been set by order of the county court for lists of registered voters at the county clerk's office.

Candidates who desire the lists are urged to file their requests as soon as possible, according to Mrs. Bereth Hopkins, county clerk and recorder. Selective lists of Republicans or Democrats can be run on the addressograph at the court house.

Recommendation for the fee was made to the county court by Mrs. Hopkins. She explained that 22 counties in Oregon charge for poll lists and the average fee is one cent per name, whether original or carbon. One county charges two cents per name and two charge 1 1/2 cents, according to the legislative interim committee on elections.

Basis for Fee
The fee is based on operator's time plus material used in producing the lists. Running the list requires about 30 hours for 25,000 names, the clerk explained.

Political parties are required to pay a similar fee for voters lists, and can be furnished copies of the complete primary registration by May 4. Any listing of subsequent registration or cancellations may be secured by the payment of the fee of one cent per name.

Administrative Changes Revealed

An administrative reorganization of the Medford police department was announced yesterday by Chief Charles Champlin.

Jack E. McMillan, who has been with the force since June, 1952, has been appointed acting sergeant in charge of the day shift. Sgt. Rollie T. Pean will be in charge of the 12 midnight to 8 a.m. shift and Service Sgt. Clyde Fichtner will be in charge of the 4 to 12 p.m. shift.

Champlin said Theodore Whisler, who has been with the department since Nov., 1953, will serve as patrolman during the 12 midnight to 8 a.m. shift. He formerly was platoon sergeant. The police budget calls for 27 men and two office personnel, including four sergeants.
