They'll Do It Every Time By Jimmy Hatlo

On The Side By E. V. Durling

I want (who does not want?) a wife, Affectionate and fair,
To solace all the woes of life And all his days to share; Of temper sweet, of yielding will,
Of firm yet placid mind,
With all my faults to love me still.
With sentiments refined.
—John Quincy Adams.

Above was written when the author was 20. He didn't find the right girl until 10 years later.
She was a 22 year old English girl, Louisa Johnson. Adams had been married 27 years when he became the sixth President of the United States. Mr. and Mrs.
Adams, the parents of four children, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary in 1847.

frequently alleged. It is "Take Off Pounds Sensibly." The mem-trying starvation diets designed to take off much weight in a short time. They follow a system which takes weight off gradually.

And when taken off stays off.

Portland Jury Hears Mrs. Fong's Escorts

Portland — (U.P.) — A Circuit court jury yesterday heard two former escorts of Mrs. Sherry Fong describe statements by the convicted woman recounting the death of 16-year-old high school girl Diane Hank.

The testimony was admitted over defense objections at the second first degree murder trial of Wey Him Fong, husband of the woman who was earlier convicted of second degree murder.
Judge Frank L. Lonergan admitted the testimony of James Whitmore and Robert Dayne Richards as evidence a crime had been committed. He instructed the jury that statements attributed to Sherry Fong were not to be considered as evidence against her husband.

Whitmore and Richards testified that Mrs. Fong had described the death of her young babysitter to them when they had dated Fong's wife. Richards is a former undercover agent for the Portland police department and is now a deputy sheriff in Clackamas county.

The state contends the Hank girl died of barbiturate poisoning administered by the Fongs.

Oregon Dairymen Plead for Price Hike

Portland — (U.P.) — Representatives of some 1500 Oregon dairymen made a plea with Portland milk distributors yesterday for a price increase of about one cent per quart for their 3.8 per cent butterfat product.

Dairymen told the milk distributors that record high labor and hay costs, plus freeze-killed pastures, had forced many of them to sell cows to maintain production.

Lester Adams, Oregon Milk Producers manager, told the distributors that producers should receive a minimum of $6 a hundred weight for A-grade 3.8 per cent butterfat milk. The group is asking for a 49 cents per hundred weight price increase.

Representatives of the two groups plan further discussion before any action is taken.

Practical Extraction of Fresh Water From Ocean Still Far Away

Washington — (U.P.) — The government still has a long way to go in its effort to develop a cheap, large-scale method for taking the salt out of sea water.

"It won't come overnight," said David S. Jenkins, the man in charge of the research. But, he said, progress is being made and new experiments will lower the costs more and more.

At present about 20 experimental projects are under way.
If even one of them is successful it could solve many of the nation's growing water-shortage problems.

Some of the principles for extracting pure water from sea and brackish inland waters have been known for hundreds of years.
The problem is to get the cost down to the point where the process is practical for cities and industries.

Research Extended
Jenkins said one method now being tested produces drinking water for about $100 an acre foot. He estimated costs will have to be scaled down to around $100 an acre foot before municipalities will be interested. Industry might be able to pay a little more in some localities where water now is particularly scarce.

Congress has authorized $10-000,000 for long-range research on water extraction methods.
The program, conducted by the Interior Department, recently was extended to 1963.

Among the methods being tested, Jenkins said, distillation now seems to offer the most promise for the cheap conversion of sea water. An "electric membrane process" shows the most promise now for converting brackish water.

The distillation process involves the use of heat to transform the sea water to vapor, leaving the salt behind. One distillation process showing great promise, Jenkins said, is "solar heat."

This method involves collecting the sun's energy under a glass enclosure which causes the saline water to vaporize on the overhead glass. It is collected as it runs off the glass to a trough.

Freezing Controlled
Another method is freezing.
Since pure water will freeze first, the method involves controlling the rate of freeze and then removing the ice containing the pure water.

Another process is called the "osmotic method." Use of a membrane, something like a sieve—which passes pure water but filters out the salt.

Things have progressed so far that some people have voiced some concern about what will happen if large-scale use of sea water lowers the ocean levels.
One worker wrote the Interior Department warning that it might ruin some scenic coastal views.

But Jenkins is unconcerned.
He said it will take umpteen years to lower the sea level even a fraction of an inch. And large-scale use of sea water is still some time off.
