

School District 6C Sets Budget Vote; Area Expanding

Central Point — Residents of School District 6C will vote in Gold Hill and Central Point Monday, April 30, at a special election on a tax levy of $282,256.81 in excess of the six percent limitation.

Funds for payment of bonds and interest and additional teachers make up the greatest part of the increase.

Polls will be open at the Gold Hill school gymnasium and Central Point Junior High gym from 7 to 8 p.m.

Totals Given
The total tax levy for the 1956-57 fiscal year amounts to $422,183, compared with $344,041 during the current year. The budgeted amount for bonds and interest totals $44,420. No money was budgeted for the expense last year, because of the receipt of O&C funds, school officials stated.

Seven additional teachers are planned for the district in the proposed budget, including one for Central Point Junior High, two from Central Point elementary, one in Gold Hill elementary and three in Crater high school. Budgeted funds for additional teachers total $29,500.

Enrollment Up
The need for more teachers is due to increased enrollment, which is beginning to reach the high school. Superintendent H. P. Jewett has pointed out. New school buildings, to be ready next spring, will increase operational and maintenance costs, also, he said.

Crater income of $25,000 to $30,000 from non-high students will continue for another year, although possible consolidation of some non-high districts with Medford is pending. Jewett said Medford has agreed to pay tuition on those students now attending Crater from the districts until they have graduated.

Bricker Amendment Still Object Of Controversy Despite Changes

Washington — (U.P.) — The Bricker Amendment has undergone drastic revisions since it was first introduced in Congress five years ago. But the latest version, like its predecessors, is still the subject of bitter controversy.

This year the battle over the proposed change in the Constitution's treaty clause has narrowed down to three words. But the disagreement over the meaning of those words—and what they would do to the President's treaty powers—is so intense that prospects are dim for Senate action at this session.

Senate Democratic leaders have indicated they do not plan to bring the amendment to a floor vote unless or until President Eisenhower publicly endorses it. There is no present indication that Mr. Eisenhower will do that.

Blood Donations Symbolize Bataan

Manila — (U.P.) — Some 200 American and Filipino servicemen gave blood this morning to the Philippine blood bank on the rock of Corregidor to symbolize the 14th anniversary of the fall of Bataan.

The ceremony commemorating the friendship of two peoples "sealed in blood" opened day long Bataan Day activities throughout the Philippines and in many states and cities in the United States. President Ramon Magsaysay declared the day a national holiday here.

The blood giving at the mouth of Corregidor's Malinta tunnel recalled dramatically one of the most heroic chapters of World War II, as well as one of the wars' darkest days for the Allies.

Japan won a victory at Bataan. But the gallant, three-month defense of the peninsula by 11,000 Americans and some 68,000 Filipinos tied down 170,000 Japanese troops and disrupted their campaign schedule.

That defense also gave Gen. Douglas MacArthur a chance to escape from Corregidor and time to save Australia before the long campaign that brought him back to Manila in triumph.

Stevenson Suspects GOPs Masquerading
Evanston, Ill. — (U.P.) — Adlai E. Stevenson took no chances at a reception in heavily-Republican Evanston Sunday.

"I suspect a lot of people here are masquerading as Republicans," the Democratic presidential hopeful said. "In view of this, I want you to know that I for one believe in the redemption of sin."

Opponents of the Bricker Amendment contend that it would seriously hamstring the President's authority in conducting foreign relations.

Sen. John W. Bricker (R-O.), the sponsor, and his supporters contend that the amendment is necessary to insure that treaties won't be used to undermine the basic constitutional rights of Americans, or to place this country under the rule of some kind of international "super-government."

The 1956 model of the amendment does not include the famous "which clause" that caused so much controversy in Bricker's first proposal. That clause would have required action by Congress, and in some cases by all 48 state legislatures, to give domestic effect to treaty agreements.

Except for three key words, the new proposal is identical to a substitute version of the Bricker amendment, sponsored by Sen. Walter F. George (D-Ga.), which the Senate rejected by a single vote in 1954.

Controversial Text
The controversial phrase, added to the amendment for the first time this year, is set off in brackets in the following text: "A provision of a treaty or other international agreement which conflicts with (any provision of) this Constitution shall not be of any force or effect."

Without the bracketed words, the amendment would simply affirm that the Constitution is supreme and no treaty may violate it.

What effect would the "three little words" have on the amendment?

Some lawyers say none at all. But others, including both supporters and opponents of the amendment, believe they would have substantially the same effect as the "which clause" of an earlier version.

That is, they would bring treaties, like ordinary congressional acts, under the "state's rights" provisions of the Constitution, and preclude the federal government from making international agreements in any field in which domestic legislative authority is reserved to the states.

Mollet, Cabinet Plan Mobilization
Paris — (U.P.) — Premier Guy Mollet and his cabinet worked today on plans to mobilize French reserves for fighting in North Africa where week-end clashes claimed 250 lives.

About 75,000 Frenchmen were expected to be recalled to the colors under Mollet's plan with 25,000 of them to be called back this week. He hopes to send 40,000 to Algeria as soon as possible.

Government sources said another 50,000 would be mobilized within the next month for another group of reinforcements. This would bring to 90,000 the new men available to fight the Algerian rebellion.

Algerian dispatches said two major engagements and a score of minor incidents left a toll of more than 250 victims in one of the bloodiest weekends of the 18-month-old rebellion.

Two engagements were among the heaviest witnesses thus far in Algeria and raged at opposite ends of the country. The French said rebel bands in both were well-armed and well-disciplined in contrast to previous hit-run guerrilla fighting.

US, Red China Talks Start Ninth Month
Geneva — (U.P.) — U. S. and Red Chinese officials today began their ninth month of talks. They still were stalemated on the repatriation of 13 Americans from Chinese jails and on the subject of Formosa.

It was the 43rd meeting since Aug. 1 for U. S. Ambassador to Czechoslovakia U. Alexis Johnson and Chinese Ambassador to Warsaw Wang Ping-nan.

MEDFORD (OREGON) MAIL TRIBUNE—FIVE

Victims of Chicago Fire Being Sought

Chicago — (U.P.) — Firemen searched cautiously through flame blackened rubble today for seven persons missing in a hotel fire which killed at least nine persons.

The seven occupants have been missing since flames raced through the four-story Sooner hotel on Chicago's South Side in the predawn hours early yesterday.

Arson squad officials said the blaze apparently was not the work of a firebug. However, an inquest opened today and coroner Walter J. McCarron said he would follow up allegedly evidence of safety rule violations.

Two of those killed in the blaze were children. Two more persons leaped 30 and 40 feet to their deaths rather than perish in the flames. A number of the eight injured suffered broken legs and other injuries in similar leaps.
