

Fort Rock Residents Lose Move To Quash Article Publication

Eugene—(U.P.)—Fort Rock basin residents lost a legal move here yesterday when a circuit judge ruled their suit to enjoin publication of articles dealing with the area amount to "censorship."

Circuit Judge A. T. Goodwin rejected a suit brought by a Fort Rock rancher, Philip H. Pittman, saying that the plaintiff had not described "one of the rare cases where injunctive relief prior to publication" was justified.

The suit sought to restrain a state farm publication from printing future articles which might be termed as discouraging persons from settling near the Fort Rock basin. Originally the suit was broke in Lake county but was transferred to Lane county.

Defendants Named
Named as defendants were the State Board of Higher Education and others responsible for the publication entitled Oregon's Agricultural Progress.

Assistant Attorney General John Nichols, representing the defendants, moved to quash service of the complaint on two counts, both of which were overruled by Judge Goodwin.

Nichols charged that warrants were improperly served and contended that the court did not have jurisdiction but rather the suit should be brought in Benton county, where the article was published.

Attorney for the plaintiff, Dennis Marvin, Bend, told the court, "I recognize that freedom of the press, one of our civil rights, is very important and that we are asking the court to do a great thing. But we feel that we are here on a just cause and that we have equally as important rights involved here."

Marvin continued, "It is my impression that the freedom of the press and speech was one of our civil rights guaranteed to individuals. That this country is made up of individuals and the government is its agency and trustee and that when the government, as it has in other places, violates the publishing and speaking that we are talking about, that civil rights shouldn't protect the state."

Can't Secure Loans
Marvin charged that since the publication of an article in January, farmers in the Fort Rock basin area have found it impossible to secure short term loans.

He also contended that prior to the publication of the articles farmers in the area had received a great many inquiries about sale of their land. Since the article was printed, he said, there have been practically no inquiries.

He said residents have seen copies of an article proposed for a forthcoming issue of the publication and have notified the proper sources that suit will be brought if the article is published.

Marvin said that he did not know if an appeal will be filed in the case.

Don't Put Reformed Mate In Way of Temptation

When a person wants to give up a bad habit, he should receive every possible encouragement, even when it means personal sacrifices from his family.

(Q) "I am 23 years old and the mother of three small children.

I like to go out at least once a week on Saturday night with my husband to dance. Lately, he hasn't wanted to take me.

About three weeks ago, he gave up drinking. He used to do a great deal of it but gave it up all of a sudden. Now he doesn't want to take me to a dance place. I told him he didn't have to drink but he is afraid if we did go he would start in all over again. He tells me to go to a show with my mother or some of my girl friends but, after all, he is my husband and I want to go out with him. Do you think that if I went out alone to a dance place, he would come to his senses and take me out? I like to have a good time and I am so unhappy about his not taking me out?"—W. B.

(A) It is natural for you to want to go out with your husband and have a good time. You are still young and have great responsibilities as a wife and mother of young children. On the other hand, you should be so thankful your husband is trying to give up his drinking, you should be willing to make any sacrifice to help him.

For a person who has been accustomed to drinking heavily, giving up drinking entirely takes tremendous will power. Going where other people are drinking and where it is easy to get a drink would put too great a strain on your husband's will power and would probably lead to a return to drinking.

There Are Ways To Help
Your husband is well aware of this and that is why he is trying to stay away from temptation. Help him here in every way you can.

There are ways for you and your husband to be together without going out to dance. If he enjoys movies, why not go with him instead of with your mother or girl friends as he has suggested? It may not be as much fun as dancing but it can be a pleasant way to spend time together. Or, you could invite friends to your home or go to theirs for cards or watching television. This would give you a change without being a strain on your husband.

Washington — (U.P.) — What's new in Washington:

It hasn't been settled yet, but the Capital may yet remain the only place you can get a drink on election day. Normally - voteless Washington residents will cast ballots on May 1 in a "primary" to name delegates to the national political conventions. The bars around town haven't had word yet whether they can open for business at 8 a.m. as usual.

On Saturday the voting board had another problem. A team captain, one James A. Abell, whose registration area is on the fringe of the district—way out—was about to take his forms out. Just before he left, the hospital called and said Mrs. Abell was about to present him with an heir. The registration forms were a little late in arriving. It was a boy. The forms finally got to the right place.

The copyright section of the Library of Congress sometimes gets requests to copyright song titles early, some late. The folks out there were a little startled when two claims came in at the same time, non related. One was a song titled "Spring Is Here." The other, "Santa Claus Is Here."

The FBI reports that during the Easter tide and blossom time, something like 6000 visitors a day tromped through their exhibits, looking at guns once fired by the unholy likes of John Dillinger, Ma Barker and her boys, Alvin "Creepy" Karpis, and "Baby Face" Nelson. Not one gun was missing after the mobs dwindled. The FBI is on the job, as always.

Rep. Leslie C. Arends, the publican from Illinois, has sent his congressional friends a poem to soothe the soul during election year. It reads:

"Among life's dying embers, "These are my regrets, "When I'm right no one remembers "When I'm wrong, no one forgets."

Delta Airlines got this letter which was sent to its Atlanta office: verbatim, it said:

"Dear sir or madam: "Did you fill out a plane ticket for a man black headed about bald, five feet nine in. tall and all of his teeth out which was going in the direction of Chicago or Washington. Enclosed you will find a stamp please let me know at once by return mail as I haven't heard from my husband yet."

Roundtree was uninjured but his companion, Gene Palmer, 23, a one-legged Korean war veteran from Auburn, Wash., suffered a skull fracture and has hospitalized at Mary's Help hospital.

Roundtree, delivering a load of lumber from Ukiah, Calif., told police he tried to stop for a traffic signal at the heavily traveled intersection of Ocean ave. and Junipero Serra blvd. He said the brake pedal "went clear to the floor."

He drove the truck into a light pole and missed crashing into three cars and a street car carrying high school and college students.

Search Abandoned For Missing Plane

Animas, N.M.—(U.P.)—The Civil Air Patrol abandoned its search yesterday for a light plane carrying two Los Angeles men and reported missing more than a week ago.

The airplane was reported missing April 2 on a flight from Los Angeles to El Paso, Tex. Air search parties combed the area near Animas for seven days without success.

Pilot of the missing plane was identified as A. C. Slatter. Hampton Hadley was reported as a passenger. Both are engineers at the North American Aviation Company at Los Angeles.

Portland Flood Potential Revised

Portland—(U.P.)—The weather bureau said today it has revised slightly upward its flood crest potential for Portland.

Anthony Polos, weather bureau hydrologist, said the stage probably would be somewhere between 25.5 and 28.5 feet, depending on the weather during the next two weeks. This is half a foot higher than previous estimates.

Flood stage in the Willamette at Portland is 18 feet. In the Columbia at Vancouver it is 15 feet.

Meanwhile, Army engineers said the $500,000 allocated to them to combat floods was the first time such money has been made available in advance of an emergency.

Alan Ladd's Daughter Files Divorce Suit

Santa Monica, Calif.—(U.P.)—Mrs. Carol Lee Anderson, 23, stepdaughter of movie actor Alan Ladd, has won a divorce from actor Richard Anderson, 29, on testimony he was interested only in furthering his screen career.

Mrs. Anderson yesterday was granted the divorce in superior court. She testified her husband was rude and the only friends he ever made were for business purposes.

The couple was married Jan. 22, 1955, and separated less than a year later on Jan. 3. The couple has no children and Mrs. Anderson requested no alimony.

Klamath Carpenters Turn Down Proposal

Klamath Falls—(U.P.)—Striking carpenters in the Klamath Falls area turned down a proposal from the Associated Building Contractors and Employers of Klamath Falls yesterday and some 200 men remained off their jobs.

Employers proposed that the strikers return to their jobs at the present rate of $2.80 an hour with the understanding that results of negotiations be retroactive to April 1.

Some 120 carpenters in Klamath Falls and Tule Lake and 90 members of allied trades have been on strike for a week now. The carpenters are asking for an hourly wage of $3.
