Wall Street

New York—U.P.—Prices on the Stock Exchange turned downward late today after a feeble attempt to move higher.

All departments joined in the retreat with the industrial shares leading the way. Steel shares led the decline in this group. Oils also were laggards.

The growing tension in the Middle East coupled with widely circulated rumors in Wall Street that the Federal Reserve was going to boost the rediscount rate were the reasons given for today's selloff.

Today's closing prices on selected stocks:
