FHA Order Halting Home Construction Becomes Effective

Portland — (U.P.)—A Federal Housing Administration order halting FHA insured home construction went into effect yesterday.

Portland home builders met with FHA officials and received official notice that inspectors were in the field under orders to reject every house at which 3/4-inch instead of 25/32-inch size boards were being used.

In Washington, D. C. Sen. Wayne Morse said he was told by an FHA official that "this is a minor matter..." He said, however, that he was intervening with the FHA and that it might be a subject for investigation by the Senate Housing Committee.

Might Stop Construction
An FHA official said the action might virtually stop home construction "if it lasts long enough for our inspectors to reach all houses under construction." Field directors of the FHA received notices late Tuesday that the FHA is "unwilling" to depart from American lumber standard specifications on the disputed 3/4-inch boards. Many sawmills have been manufacturing the 3/4-inch size instead of the 25/32 inch size. The FHA earlier indicated it was a technicality which could be worked out soon.

Souvenir Hunters Steal Bavarian Coat of Arms
Munich, Germany — (U.P.)— Youthful British souvenir hunters stole the Bavarian coat of arms from the top of Germany's highest mountain, according to police. Officials said the insignia was taken from the Zugspitze by a group of 41 school boys, accompanied by two teachers, but they were caught.

Curves Slow Curvaceous Sophia Loren; Gloria Swanson Dislikes Auto Rally

By GLORIA SWANSON
Written for United Press
San Remo, Italy—(U.P.)—This charming little town on the Italian Riviera was the scene of this year's cinema auto rally, an autrace in which the drivers are Italian film personalities.

Ordinarily the rally would have finished during the film festival at Cannes, 33 miles west of Monte Carlo, but the festival was postponed this year to fall after the Grace Kelly wedding. Sophia Loren, a contestant in the rally, laughingly confessed to me that she had finished last. When I asked her why, she said she had to slow down on the curves.

It seems the windshield and windows of her car were broken by eager fans along the route. She couldn't show us any evidence of black and blue spots from pinches, though—because her dress fits her like a doekin. With her it isn't a question of wearing or not wearing a dress. Actually, she could get the same effect if she just wore a thick coat of paint.

Point of View
From a man's point of view, better known as angle, it is the statuesque body beautiful. But from a short woman's view, I can say I've got what she's got only mine isn't pulled in and stretched out in such obvious curves.

Rossano Brazzi was a contestant, too, but he wasn't bragging about how he finished. Albert Sordi, who played "My Son Nero" in the movie of the same name, won.

Though I had been invited to drive in the rally, for me it probably would have been less eventful and hazardous than my trip from Monte Carlo. The car that came to fetch me broke down. My maid had to remain at the border for lack of papers. A friend with a tiny jalopy kindly rescued me.

Some Abuse
Since I didn't appear in a beautiful car with official numbers my friend and I were being abused and shouted at by police and populace alike, especially when we unknowingly got on the course where the contestants were vying for speed records. Shrieking and waving us aside, they sped by.

Around Hollywood

Hollywood — (U.P.)— Jess Barker has a solution to the divorce rate in Hollywood: Wives should stay away from divorce lawyers and work out their problems at home.

Barker is back at work on a flourishing new career and trying to forget his numerous personal difficulties that make him a runner-up to Dick Haymes in the trouble department.

But the affable, handsome actor had one last observation on the situation after headlines appeared on the Jeanne Crain-Paul Brinkman break. Miss Crain hired the same attorney as did Barker's ex-mate, Susan Hayward.

Barker in Demand
Now that Barker has cleared up his personal life he's back in demand in Hollywood. He appears on NBC's Emmy Award-winning daytime color television drama, "Matinee Theater," in a drama with Diana Lynn. He said he was grateful to producer Albert McCleery for giving him the comeback role.

"This show is an actors' dream," he said enthusiastically as he waited for a rehearsal. "All those closeups! Many actors are nervous about this program, but I think it's great."

But my driving friend seemed to want to get into the act. When a car swerved at 80 miles an hour to avoid hitting us and pedestrians flew in all directions under their own steam, I said like Garbo, "I want to go home."

By ALINE MOSBY United Press Correspondent

"Yes, things are better for me now and some other offers are coming up. But I did well before all this happened. I've been an actor for 20 years, you know. And a lot of people don't know I came from the stage."

Pockets Empty
Barker confessed in a recent court appearance for a paternity suit brought by actress Yvonne Doughty that he had only a couple of dollars in his pocket. Today the actor cheerfully declared that his future plans include "to keep working." Currently he's living with friends and "trying to collect more than five thousand bucks people owe me around town."

"I am open to stage, screen or TV ideas," he said with a grin. And future romantic plans?

"I don't go out with anyone in particular," Barker said firmly. "No, I haven't sworn off women. Who can do that? But I can't say anything about future marriages — I'm still legally married as there has been no final decree."

House Leader Told To 'Get Flexible'

Washington — (U.P.) — News photographers were snapping pictures of House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin Jr. shortly before Republicans caucused on the controversial farm bill.

A colleague noted that Martin was sitting stiffly in his chair. "Relax Joe," the colleague quipped, "Don't be so rigid. Get flexible."
