SOC Students Burn 'Milk Bottle' in Protest About Food

Ashland—A group of about 50 male students at Southern Oregon college last Thursday evening burned a "milk bottle" in effigy, then chanted, "We want more milk."

The men, all dressed in white sheets, burned the six-foot effigy in front of Susanne Homes hall, where meals are served. The giant-sized bottle bore the inscription, "Seris Milk from Discontented Cows."

Chuck Weir, past president of the men's dorm, said the effigy burning was apparently a move to express general discontent with the dining service in Susanne Homes hall.

The Medical Roundup

by Walter Alvarez

Emeritus Consultant in Medicine, Mayo Clinic
Emeritus Professor of Medicine, Mayo Foundation

The New Wonder Drugs

Most persons who are suffering from nervousness or nervous tension or symptoms of a mild psychosis nowadays get treated with one or two or three of the so-called wonder drugs. The sale of these has been enormous and recently I saw in Time that in Hollywood, where many people live the strenuous life, one of these new drugs is so greatly in demand that druggists have to ration the few thousand tablets they can get each week.

Walter Alvarez

I have seen a few miracles from using these drugs but, usually with the dose advised for patients not being watched in a hospital, the results obtained were not striking. In some cases the patient got such an uncomfortable reaction after taking a few pills that he wouldn't take any more. This, of course, is the story of most drugs. Some persons get a wonderful result; some cannot be sure they were helped; and a few react badly.

One of the drugs has to be used with some care because an occasional person taking it soon becomes jaundiced. Fortunately, the jaundice seems rarely to be of a bad type, and so far as I know, it goes away of itself, without leaving any measurable damage to the liver. So far this jaundice has attacked only one of my patients. Another of these much-used drugs sometimes produces symptoms of so-called Parkinson's disease, in which there is a poker face and marked tremor of one or both hands.

Doubtless, in most cases, the failure of us physicians to get results with these new drugs is due to the fact that we prescribe only the recommended, usually safe dosage. Today, in mental hospitals they give enormous doses of these drugs. Apparently, most of the patients tolerate such over-dosage.

Drugs May Calm Patient

When a man in a mental hospital is violent, large amounts of one of these drugs may calm him down to the point where he no longer is dangerous; he becomes reasonable so that the attendants and doctors can talk to him and influence his behavior. He may get so well that he can go home.

The great advantage of these new drugs is that they can calm a nervous tension without necessarily making the persons sleepy. Actually in many of the cases in which I have used the drugs, the person did get more sleepy than he cared to be.

What is to be hoped and expected is that in the next few years many more of these tension-removing drugs will be synthesized in chemical laboratories. Already I hear of a new one, the action of which is said to be almost free from unpleasant side effects.

The thing that everyone should know about the new modern synthetic drugs is that many of them are potentially dangerous because they act by weakening some important chemical reaction in the body or they combat the actions of certain nerves. When, in the cases of highly sensitive persons, the drugs overdo this job the person can become much upset. When that happens he (or she) must immediately stop the use of the drug. Later, he can discuss with his doctor the wisdom or unwisdom of trying to take it again. What I fear always is that one of my patients will go on taking a medicine I prescribed—long after it has begun to make him dangerously ill.

I will never forget a man whose life was saved only because his doctor, to whom he was devoted, died. The doctor had prescribed a drug which we now rarely use because it occasionally produced jaundice with a fatal destruction of the liver. When the patient I saw turned yellow he could not consult his doctor because the doctor was dying. Because the patient did not suspect that his jaundice was due to the drug he was taking, he went on swallowing three or four pills a day. Only when his doctor died did he come to me. Fortunately, I recognized the queer shade of yellow that at that time was commonly seen and produced by the drug. I stopped him from taking it—just in time to save his life.

Story of Warning

I tell this story not to frighten you good people but to warn you that today the druggists' shelves are full of drugs, far more powerful and hence more dangerous than mankind ever saw before. Recently, my friend Professor David Barr, of Cornell, published a paper in which he said that many of the persons ill in his hospital were on their back because they had taken too much of some powerful drug to which they happened to be sensitive.

What is the moral? Never go on taking a medicine long after it has either done its work or else has shown that it is not going to produce any effect. Whenever a strange illness comes, stop the taking of all drugs and see what happens. I remember a woman whose hair started to come out in handfuls. On her own hook, she had been taking enormous doses of a certain vitamin. Other patients of mine with diarrhea or abdominal cramps were cured overnight when they stopped taking an unneeded drug which they thought would be a valuable tonic.

Dr. Alvarez regrets he hasn't the time in which to read or answer requests for information.
