Margaret, Husband in Seclusion

Nassau, Bahamas—(U.P.)—Margaret Truman Daniel and her New York newspaperman husband E. C. Daniel Jr., went into seclusion today in their honeymoon cottage—a luxurious 14-room villa overlooking the sea. Margaret appeared tired when they arrived here at 6 p.m. Sunday on a flight from Miami with four other honeymooning couples. But she brightened and posed for photographers before leaving for their home. They were met by about 150 persons, mostly vacationing Americans at Nassau's palm-fringed airport just outside the city. Daniel had only a "no comment now" to questions by reporters. The Daniels bypassed customs and immigration clearance and were whisked away in a taxi to the mansion lent them by French Count Guy de la Fregonnaire, a diplomatic official. The Daniels left Chicago Sunday morning and were mobbed by some 600 well-wishers and newsmen when they arrived at Miami's International Airport before boarding a Pan American plane for the brief flight to Nassau.

By UNITED PRESS
Less than four weeks were left today before Oregon's May 18 primary as the campaign pace stepped up.

Sen. Estes Kefauver (D-Tenn.) made a flying visit to Portland and said "the fat cats and big mules" will pour money into Oregon this fall in an effort to defeat Sen. Wayne Morse for reelection.

Kefauver told Oregon Young Democrats Saturday night that Douglas McKay, former interior secretary seeking the GOP nomination to oppose Morse, "personifies" the Eisenhower administration which, he said, "has put a west . . . by its failures in the field of natural resources development."

Stevenson Due
"I understand that Douglas McKay is the candidate of President Eisenhower and the Republican national committee," Kefauver said and whether or not he wins the Republican nomination, he "is going to be the campaign issue."

McKay is opposed by Phil Hitchcock, Elmer Deetz and George Altwater for the GOP nomination.

Adlai Stevenson, who will compete with Kefauver for Democratic write-in votes at the primary, is scheduled to arrive in Portland next Saturday for an intensive three-day campaign, according to his state campaign managers. Stevenson has meetings scheduled at St.

Chinese, Nationalist Vessels Exchange Fire

Taipei, Formosa—(U.P.)—Chinese Communist gunboats and Nationalist naval patrol vessels exchanged gunfire in a 50-minute duel 15 miles west of the Matsu Island group Sunday, Nationalist Chinese sources announced.

A defense ministry communiqué said the Communists were supported by shore artillery, which fired more than 200 rounds to provide support for the Red flotilla as it sailed from the mouth of the Min river.

There was no mention of damage or casualties on either side.

Helens, Astoria, Milwaukie, Medford and Klamath Falls as well as Portland and also plans to return again before the primary, his supporters said.

McKay in Willamette Valley

McKay today carried his attack on Sen. Morse into the Willamette valley. He attended yesterday's annual white water boat race down the McKenzie river. Today he was to speak at Independence at noon, make a handshaking tour at Dallas in the afternoon and speak at Mt. Angel tonight. Tuesday he will be in Clackamas county.

Sen. Richard L. Neuberger (D-Ore.), said in Washington, D.C., yesterday that the Oregon Republican primary race for the U.S. Senate is a "phantom election" because "the two most vocal candidates (McKay and Hitchcock) are afraid to run against each other."

Neuberger said he thought "all right-thinking liberal Republicans should vote for Deetz because 'Mr. Deetz is conducting a clean campaign.'"

Veteran Benefits in Non-War Disabilities Hit by Commission

Washington—(U.P.)—A special presidential commission recommended today that the government halt special aid to veterans whose ailments and disabilities have no connection with their military service.

The top-level commission said in its report to President Eisenhower that more help should be given to ex-GIs who were badly disabled in uniform or whose disabilities result directly from their service to their country.

Bradley Called To Explain
Gen. Omar N. Bradley, World War II hero and former veterans administrator, was called before the House Veterans Committee to explain its proposals.

His commission braved the wrath of the big veterans organizations with its recommended crackdown on non-service connected benefits. It ran head-on into a fast-rolling drive by the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars to establish what would amount to a general service pension based on age and a liberalized test of need.

Without referring to these organizations by name, the commission said the general pension proposal would be "national folly," leading to a "tremendous" increase in veterans cost.

Would Eliminate Pensions
In view of expanded Social Security coverage, it said, ex-GIs with non-service disabilities should be considered in the same category as other citizens and their pensions and other benefits should be "minimized and gradually eliminated."

The commission was appointed by Mr. Eisenhower last year to look into all benefits granted the nation's 22,000,000 veterans. The President pointed out in his January budget message that costs are increasing and nearly half the population potentially is entitled to benefits of some kind.

Columbia, Willamette Flood Stage Waited

Portland—(U.P.)—Weather bureau forecasters said today that the Columbia and Willamette rivers would reach flood stage at Portland this week.

Forecasters said the Columbia will top flood stage at Vancouver Tuesday and the Willamette is expected to reach the 18-foot mark at Portland Wednesday.

Little serious flooding is expected, however. The rise of the Columbia is attributed to the lowering of the pool behind Grand Coulee dam to allow for greater storage capacity during the peak runoff season.
