Some Common Tragedies of Life

Every so often I see a person who wants psychiatric help, but who has such a terrible problem and such an insoluble one I do not see how even the most kindly and a skillful psychiatrist could help much. For instance: The other day in came a sad-looking woman who said that since childhood she has always been unhappy and at times depressed. As a child, she was miserable because her father was a very unpleasant and bad-tempered man, who apparently was mentally abnormal. He was the worse for the great strain of supporting eight children. Curiously, he blamed his wife for having so many children, and he blamed them for having come along. He fussed at the poor wife, he nagged her, and he was mean to the children.

When my patient married, her husband was making barely enough for them to live on. After two children came there just wasn't enough food and clothing for the family, and so the husband had to give up his comfortable indoor job and go on driving a truck. Only by working overtime could he make enough for all of them. Then what distressed the poor woman was that she rarely saw her husband. He left early in the morning, and sometimes had to be away on the road for several days. The poor wife suffered without companionship and love, and the children also kept wishing that saw called "Saturday's Children." It ought to be shown as a movie every few months in every high school of the land. It tells the story of a couple of loving youngsters who got married on a shoe-string. Soon the young husband was getting more and more angered at the collectors who came every month for installments on the furniture and the many other things they had had to get for their little apartment. As often happens with persons who are not really adult, the lad started taking out his annoyance on his innocent little wife. She had had to go to work as a secretary, and the husband bitterly resented the kindnesses that her boss occasionally showed her. Finally, one evening when he wanted a few dollars which he might perhaps lose at a meeting of his penny ante poker club, and his wife had to tell him that she just could not let him have it because the next morning a collector was due, he blew up and walked out, saying he had had all he could stand. The other day when I came into my office, I found a nice-looking woman in her thirties sitting there crying silently. She, who had been a professional singer and who loved music and excitement of show business, had married a handsome man with a good job. But soon she found that her husband, when he came home at night, was tired; he was quiet and reserved, with nothing to say. He read his paper; he looked at television, and soon he went upstairs to bed. As years went by, the situation became more and more intolerable to the wife. She so wanted to get out occasionally in the evening but her husband refused to go. She thought at times of leaving him, but with two children who needed a home and a father, she did not see how she could carry on alone. As I said to the husband, I sympathized with him; I knew what it was to come home at the end of a hard day's work too tired to go out again. But still I felt he was slowly killing his wife's spirit; a thing he was foolish to do. He was foolish, also, to be killing his wife's love.

Without Painful Backache

Nagging backache, headache, or muscular aches and pains may come on with over-exertion, emotional upsets or day-to-day stress and strain. And folks who eat and drink unwisely sometimes suffer mild bladder irritation... with that restless, uncomfortable feeling. If you are miserable and worn out because of these discomforts, Doan's Pills often help by their pain relieving action, by their soothing effect to ease bladder irritation, and by their mild diuretic action through the kidneys—tending to increase the output of the 16 miles of kidney tubes.
