

LOVE THEFT CHARGED—Barbara Ann O'Shea (left), 25, has filed a $50,000 suit against comedienne Martha Faye for allegedly alienating the affections of her husband, Westport, Conn., policeman Robert O'Shea (right), 27. The patrolman once worked as a bodyguard for Miss Faye after she received threats on her life. Miss Faye said through her attorney she was "horrified, stunned and shocked" at the accusations.

Around Hollywood

Hollywood—(U.P.)—The movie life story of Buster Keaton will tell bluntly of his alcohol problem and his fall from the heights of screen greatness.

Hollywood has stopped fooling the public with such fictionalized biographies as "The Jolson Story."

Now a celebrity's life tale is told with the unhappy side, and thus the exciting drama, left in "The Buster Keaton Story," which begins shooting at Paramount next month, will be in the manner of "Love Me Or Leave Me" and "I'll Cry Tomorrow."

When Donald O'Connor combs his hair sideways and claps that famous Keaton flat straw skimmer on his head, he'll portray what producer Robert Smith calls "The rise and fall of Buster Keaton."

Truth Unfolded
 "The story will be true to his life, about the drinking and his adjustment," O'Connor said today. "He never really found himself until after his great success."

O'Connor is screening all the great silent Keaton comedies so he can study that great comedy artist. The younger entertainer also is practicing Keaton's pratfalls, from back flips to "ear slides," that make this role the most difficult of O'Connor's career.

Often Keaton joins O'Connor in producer Smith's office and they have over comedy "bits" that will be repeated in the picture.

Although he is 60, Keaton can do falls that pale the younger O'Connor.

Wardrobe Duplicated
 O'Connor will wear a duplicate of Keaton's original wardrobe when he goes into such famous Keaton routines as the stuck-together card-dealing bit from "The Navigator." O'Connor will also repeat the wonderful gag in which Keaton stood in the bow of his little boat as it was launched. The boat grandly sailed down the skids, and just as grandly sank to the bottom. Only his famous pancake-thin hat was left floating on the water.

O'Connor fits neatly into the role because he always has been a lover of the silent screen and pantomime comedy. He did five such sketches for his television series. And it was his idea to put such veterans as Francis X. Bushman, Minta Durfee, Conrad Nagel and Blanche Sweet into "The Buster Keaton Story."

Bend Not To Be Locale For Hollywood Picture
 Bend—(U.P.)—Hollywood will not come to Bend for the filming of a forthcoming film as had been previously planned, officials here have been informed.

Producers of "Fort Laramie," a film planned for the Deschutes region near Bend, announced that a change in plans had been made and that the movie will be shot elsewhere. Previous plans had called for the movie to start work on location here about the 15th of this month.

On The Side

Among the male inventors who made life easier for females and to whom our countrywomen owe a vote of thanks is Solomon Goldberg. He invented the crinkled hairpin. Before that all hairpins were straight and difficult to keep in the hair. The crinkled hairpin cured that distressing situation. Goldberg is reported to have made a fortune from this simple invention.

Horses and Women
 Does your wife tell her real age? Sarah Bernhardt never lied about her age. An extremely unusual procedure for an actress. Sarah had a reason for her truthfulness. When 60 she always frankly said, "I am 60 years old." She didn't look it. Sarah figured if she said she was 45 people would say, "How old she looks." But if she told her real age they would say, "How young she looks."

Asides
 One blessed event record that is never been topped in this country is that established by an Austin, Tex., woman, who gave birth to a child each year from 1916 to 1939 inclusive. . . . The combining of Scotch whiskey and soda is an English idea. The Scots are opposed to it, claiming it injures the whiskey. A Scot believes in taking his whiskey straight with a drink of water following.

Abnormal Cells In Mental Disease

Chicago — (U.P.) — Dr. Linus Pauling, Nobel prize-winning chemist, said yesterday that mental disease may be due to "molecular abnormalities."

Pauling of the California Institute of Technology, addressed the 112th annual meeting of the American Psychiatric Association.

Pauling told the psychiatrists that progress in solving the riddle may be made through research for abnormal molecules and a study of their molecular structure.

Pauling said the molecular basis of hereditary disease has been clarified by research in a type of anemia known as sickle-cell anemia.

He said it was found that this disease is caused by the manufacture of hemoglobin molecules that differ slightly in structure from the molecules of normal adult hemoglobin, or red blood cells.

The manufacture of these old blood cells is controlled by the genes, Pauling said.

State Court Upholds Power Surcharge

Salem — (U.P.) — The State Supreme Court has held that charges collected by Pacific Power and Light Company under a surcharge ordered by the Public Utilities Commission were lawful rates.

In so ruling, the high court dismissed a suit filed on behalf of approximately 50,000 electric power consumers against the Mountain States Power Company which merged with PP&L.
