Three Issues Debated By League

Chicago—(U.P.)—The League of Women Voters tried today to decide which one of three issues should be dropped from its action program for the next two years.

The issues which came under debate at the league convention are the federal loyalty-security program, water conservation and economic aid to underdeveloped countries.

The convention is trying to limit the program of which the league will concentrate its work. A number of member leagues have asked that the program be restricted to two subjects.

Mrs. Hewitt Joyce Jr. of Western Springs, Ill., spoke in favor of continuing work on the federal loyalty security program yesterday.

"There is nothing certain groups would like better than to see us discontinue this program," she said.

Foreign Economic Aid
Mrs. Donald Kennett of St. Louis urged adoption of the issue involving foreign economic aid. She said United States economic policies are "outdated to a large extent due to recent shifts in Soviet cold war strategy."

Mrs. Murrel Loring of Los Angeles said "we have talked a lot about aid to other countries. It seems to me we have forgotten we have a few underdeveloped areas in our own country."

Mrs. W. E. Stevens of Laramie, Wyo., said the water conservation program was "highly emotional" and "someone like the league should make a study and present unbiased information on it."

"Water in the West has been an emotional question ever since men with guns guarded water holes," Mrs. Stevens said.

She said water is tied up with other major problems. Part of the farmer's "plight," she said, is due to long-term drought in many areas.

"Water Problem Confused"
Mrs. L. A. McKay, Berkeley, Calif., said "the nation is in a state of utter confusion" about the whole problem of water resources, and the league should take the lead in studying it.

Margaret Coppinger, Kennewick, Wash., said water is not only a national problem but has international aspects. In the Pacific Northwest, she said, control of water resources in some instances is shared by the United States and Canada.

Opponents of the water proposal argued it should be handled on a regional basis.

TIME TO QUIT
Adrian, Mich.—(U.P.)—Fred Willnow figured that at 82 he was getting too old to drive, so he sold his 1928 Chevrolet, still as shiny as the day he bought it 28 years ago.
