Five Canoes Spill In Swollen Creek

Eric, Pa. — (U.P.) — Five canoes, carrying eight boy scouts and two scoutmasters, struck a submerged tree while rounding a curve in treacherous, rain-swollen French creek Saturday.

Two scouts and one scoutmaster were missing. The others made their way to shore and were taken to Stem Memorial hospital in Union City, Pa.

French creek, normally a swift-moving and meandering stream, was swollen by heavy rains in the Erie county area during the night. It was as much as 30 foot deep in the area where the mishap occurred.

Around Hollywood

By JERRY WALD
Written for the United Press
Hollywood—(U.P.)—Time passes so quickly that 20 years ago often seems like yesterday. Odd how the brain stores experience so that long past happenings can be relived in the mind as though they occurred only recently.

Here are a few that come to my mind most easily and vividly. In the next few weeks, "The Eddy Duchin Story" will go into release for Columbia Pictures. I'm double close to the film because I'm producing it, and because it's the story of an old friend of mine. It's a wonderful feeling and privilege to make the life story of someone I knew.

First Meeting Related
My first meeting with Eddy Duchin was in the late 20s when he was second pianist with Leo Reisman's orchestra. I had just started writing a column for the Evening Graphic, and Eddy was anxious to have his name mentioned.

"He had studied to be a pharmacist and still was uncertain about going into the music field. He didn't need to be unsure because he had a terrific talent for tickling the ivories. Leo was impressed by Eddy's enthusiasm, but he had to caution him about letting it run away with him.

Patience Learned
"Learn patience," Leo told him. Thus Eddy developed a kind of patient obstinacy, and he took Leo's advice to heart. He moved up fast.

Two Indicted in Assault on Cole

Birmingham, Ala. — (U.P.) — Two white men were indicted Friday for assault with intent to murder Negro singer Nat (King) Cole during a performance at the city auditorium.

Four others have been convicted on lesser charges and sentenced to six months in jail. Each of the four also was fined $1,000.

Kenneth Adams, 35, and Willis R. Vinson, 23, both of Aniston, Ala., were indicted for assault with intent to murder, a charge carrying two to 20 years in prison on conviction.

The state charged the two men leaped onto the stage while Cole sang to an all-white audience last April 10 and tackled the Negro, hurling him against a piano. Cole later cancelled several southern engagements.

Robber Apologetic In New York Theft

New York — (U.P.) — Mrs. Yel-ta Wenglinsky, 73, said the armed robber who entered her apartment Friday, tied her to a chair and made off with a $350 diamond ring and $15 in cash was most apologetic.

"I was present when Bing Crosby, the new sensation, met Rudy Vallee, the established star, for the first time. Bing was wearing a canary yellow sweater, a rose shirt and a paisley scarf. They each heartily complimented the other.

"But I'd better stop now. I could go on all day.
