Orchestra Is Member Of League

The Philharmonic Society of Southern Oregon is now a member of the American Symphony Orchestra league, according to word received by Richard D. Werner, conductor of the local symphony orchestra. The Philharmonic Society recently presented its third and final concert of the season at the Medford High school auditorium.

The American Symphony Orchestra league, with headquarters in Charleston, W. Va., has a membership of some 200 symphony orchestras throughout the United States, including such famous ones as the Boston Symphony, the New York Philharmonic, the San Francisco Symphony, the Los Angeles Philharmonic, St. Louis Symphony, and the Chicago Symphony.

The aim of the orchestra league is to encourage and guide symphony orchestras wherever formed. It sponsors various service programs, including arts festivals and councils, conferences, and workshop programs of numerous types. Included on the league's impressive calendar for 1958 is a western conference of orchestras to be held in California this summer.

The American Symphony Orchestra league was formed to meet the notable upsurge of interest shown in symphonic music all over the United States and Canada in recent years.
