The Medical Roundup

by Walter Alvarez

Emeritus Consultant in Medicine, Mayo Clinic
Emeritus Professor of Medicine, Mayo Foundation

The Need for Impartial Medical Expert Testimony

An important book has just been published (Macmillan) for the Bar Association of the City of New York, in which men have grappled at last with the disgraceful situation which has long existed in our courts in regard to "expert testimony" when a well-to-do-murderer is to be let off on the plea that, for a few minutes, he was insane. Three experts for the prosecution say he was sane, while the three for the defense say he was insane. Through the years many good lawyers and good physicians have become distressed over this sort of thing. In 1917, Dr. John Oliver showed in the courts of Baltimore how easily this scandal could be cleared up with great satisfaction to everyone, but so far as I know, few jurists followed Oliver's lead.

Walter Alvarez

Since 1952, in New York City, an effort has been made to rely for medical opinion on a panel of unquestionably expert men who do not have to depend for their remuneration on either the prosecution or the defense. This is an important point. In some courts the same sort of medical panel has been set up to help the judge and jury appraise the amount of injury sustained by a plaintiff in an accident. As a result, such trials have become much more dignified affairs with less hysteria and more good sense. With the wrangling eliminated, the trials have been much shortened, which is good in these days when courts often are years behind on their work.

Influence in Court

In the new report from New York, the experiment is evaluated by my good friend, Dr. I. S. Wright. He showed that in many cases, with the new method, an impartial expert had great influence in court because he was so obviously impartial and just trying to help the judge to understand the technical aspects of the problem. Often the expert found the two parties to the suit remarkably co-operative and honest in their dealings with him. Perhaps they knew that they could not fool him as they could fool 12 laymen who had no technical knowledge of the matter. The doctors were much pleased with the new method if only because it did not waste their time with silly wrangling.

It is sad that we human beings have had to learn so slowly what should have been obvious from the start. I saw the great need for this sort of thing some 45 years ago, when in court I would not be allowed to say, in a few sentences, what I thought about the case. All I could do was to answer questions, often with a 'yes' or a 'no.' Sometimes this compelled me to leave an impression that I did not want to leave because it was wrong.

Often, I was led off by clever questions into a useless and heated argument calculated only to get the jury's minds far away from the one important point at issue. Often I wished I could say to the judge, "Why waste a day arguing about this red-herring that has nothing to do with the case?" But this, of course, under the rules, I could not do.

In my later years in San Francisco a friend of mine, an eminent superior judge, sometimes used to drop in at the close of a day to get help from me in understanding a difficult case brought before him, in which there was a medical problem. So often he would leave saying, "I learned more from you in these 15 minutes than I learned during a week's listening to the arguing, back and forth, of those experts. I see now that while they were made to talk a lot, they were kept from summing up in a few minutes what is the real rub of the matter."

American Tourists To Exceed Last Year Expenditures Abroad

Washington— (U.P.) —A record flood of American tourists spent more than $1,000,000,000 in foreign countries last year — and this year they will exceed it by 10 to 15 per cent.

That's the word from travel experts in Washington who base their estimates in part on the fact that applications for passports so far this year are running 13.3 per cent over the same period in 1955.

One reason for this increase in Americans abroad is that foreign countries have successfully engaged in a promotion campaign to lengthen the vacation season so that it includes not only the summer months but extends from mid-May to mid-October.

Spreading Out

Another feature is that U.S. travelers this year will range over a wider geographical area than previously. Officials say that not even the relatively acute political crisis in the Middle East has discouraged travelers to that area.

Americans are looking with sharpened interest to inexpensive Spain and to Austria and some tours are planned to Soviet Russia. Western Germany is making its biggest bid since the war for the tourist trade.

Nevertheless, France — and particularly Paris — will probably still hold first spot in European popularity with the British Isles and Italy about equal for second place and Switzerland next.

Others Trying

The tremendous dollar flow that European countries have found in tourist trade has inspired other areas to emulate them. American countries recently participated in an inter-American travel congress at San Jose, Costa Rica, and adopted the most elaborate program in history.

Pacific and African countries also are stepping up efforts to attract tourists.

Among the 142,478 passports issued in the first quarter of this year, 95,813 were for pleasure travel.

The majority of travelers to Europe this year will be by air, as in 1955 when air travelers exceeded ship travelers for the first time.

There's be a slight change in sailor's chanties about the briney deep after the next hydrogen bomb drop in the Pacific.

GM Lays Off 1,800 Production Workers

Detroit — (U.P.)— Michigan's unemployed stood at an estimated 191,800 Saturday with the layoff of 1,800 production workers by the General Motors Corp.

The workers were laid off at GM's Fisher body and Pontiac divisions Friday.

A company spokesman said the work force slash was due to a readjustment of production schedules. He said the cut was in line with a statement made by GM President Harlow H. Curtice earlier this week that additional layoffs were expected in the auto industry.

Thursday, Gov. G. Mennen Williams declared "unemployment has reached serious proportions in Michigan" and called for an emergency session of the Full Employment committee for next Thursday at Detroit.

About 80 per cent of all the land in the United States is now within soil conservation district boundaries, including 85 per cent of all farmland and 90 per cent, in number, of all farms and ranches.
