Reviving Military Feud Dangerous, Wilson Declares

Washington — (U.P.) — Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson said today after talking with President Eisenhower that it might be "dangerous" for anybody in the military to revive a feud between the services.

Wilson said the President is "a bit unhappy about the fact that we don't seem to get along better in the services."

Two Senate subcommittees served notice that they will investigate the inter-service controversies over missiles and air power. They decided to look into the feud despite Wilson's claim Monday that the squabbling has been exaggerated.

Wilson was questioned about his attitude toward the congressional investigation of the heated competition between the services.

Wilson recalled that in his news conference late Monday he said he saw no particular need for a congressional inquiry.

Wilson called on the President with Adm. Arthur W. Radford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Wilson said "we had some more important things to talk about" than the service feud.

Wilson said the subcommittee, Symington said, also "will inquire into the Navy's mission in the field of air power, including both its primary and secondary missions."

Sen. Dennis Chavez (D-N.M.) said his Military Appropriations subcommittee also will "look into this mess" stirred up by bitter inter-service rivalries over roles and missions.

Fish Screens at Savage Rapids Given House OK

An item of $208,000 for building fish screens at Savage Rapids dam has been cleared by the House of Representatives, according to Congressman Harris Ellsworth.

The amount is included in the big public works bill, now being considered by the House.

The bill is expected to be up for final passage this afternoon.

Ellsworth, in a telephone report to the Mail Tribune, said it is "almost a miracle" that the House cleared the Savage Rapids dam screening item prior to the passage of the bill, but that it now appears to be safe.

The amount was not included in the administration's budget as presented to Congress, and Ellsworth said he did a great deal of work before it was included.

Under Consideration The public works bill was under consideration at the time he called, at 11:30 a.m. (3:30 p.m. Washington time).

The screening of the turbines and canals at the dam has long been sought by sportsmen and others in the valley, for studies have shown them to constitute one of the major hazards to fish life in the area.

Lake Ranchhand in Serious Condition A Lake county ranchhand was in serious condition in a local hospital today after he was injured when thrown from a bucking horse in calf branding operations yesterday.

Timothy O'Sullivan, 28, was flown here from Lake county by a Mercy Flights, Inc. plane.

The accident, according to fellow workers, happened about 8:30 a.m. yesterday. O'Sullivan had roped a calf when his horse began to buck. He was thrown but his foot caught in the stirrup and the horse bolted into the corral.

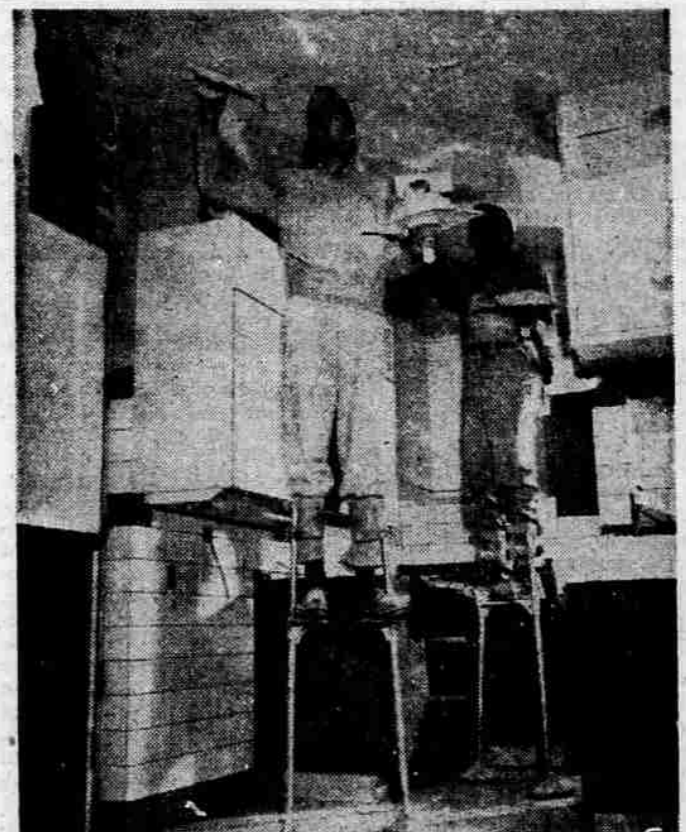

There was no flatted truck in camp so fellow workers made a 25-mile round trip to obtain a pickup truck. It took until 2:30 p.m. for O'Sullivan to reach Lakeview where he was given first aid and then flown here.

He was reported still unconscious this morning.

The accident happened on the desert about 30 miles north of Plush.

Break in Dikes Eases Pressure of Kootenai At Bonners Ferry

The level of the flood-swollen Kootenai river dropped slowly at Bonners Ferry today as it spread out into two big diking districts, but Army engineers said the stream would rise again tonight and would not crest until Friday.

The dikes breached yesterday eased the pressure on the remaining levees and dropped the river level to 32 feet, but it rose a foot last night upstream at Libby, Mont., causing engineers to change their earlier prediction that the river would crest Thursday.

5,000 Acres Inundated The river has inundated about 5,000 acres of land in diking districts one and seven adjacent to Bonners Ferry.

The Columbia river at Vancouver, Wash., rose 1.4 feet in the 24 hours ending at 8:30 a.m. today and was 6.2 feet over the 15-foot flood stage.

The streams were expected to rise in the Portland area until Wednesday night, followed by little change. No heavy damage was reported.

House Committee Cuts $1 Billion From Foreign Aid

'Ample Funds' Said Already on Hand Washington — (U.P.) — The House Foreign Affairs Committee voted 18 to 11 today to slash $1,000,000,000 in military funds from President Eisenhower's $4,900,000,000 foreign aid program.

President Eisenhower had urged approval of the entire program and warned that any major cuts would jeopardize this country's global position.

Ample Funds Claimed Committee Chairman James P. Richards (D-S.C.), in announcing the cut, said the administration has "ample funds" already on hand to carry out all necessary military aid programs for at least the next two years.

The $1,000,000,000 slash was approved after the committee rejected on a "rather close" vote a proposed $1,200,000,000 in military aid. Richards declined to give the precise vote on the deeper cut.

An attempt by Rep. John M. Vorys of Ohio, key Republican on the committee, to hold the cut to $500,000,000 also was defeated.

In voting the $1,000,000,000 cut, the committee specified that $48,000,000 of the remaining military funds must be used in Spain and that not more than $402,000,000 should be spent in Europe.

The administration had planned to spend $760,000,000 of the total military funds in Europe.

Sources close to the committee told the United Press the reduction, all of it in the $3,000,000,000 fund the President requested for military aid, was approved at a closed committee meeting.

The development came as Secretary of State John Foster Dulles pledged the administration to an all out Senate fight to win specific authority to make long term foreign aid commitments.

Doesn't Meet Hopes He told his news conference that the House committee's declaration favoring long term aid does not meet his hopes for clear congressional approval of the administration plan.

The House group has rejected the President's plea for authority to commit the United States to support long term aid projects. Instead, it adopted a resolution saying Congress considers itself bound to continue foreign aid as long as the Communist menace exists.

Postal Rate Boost Gets Committee OK Washington — (U.P.) — The House Post Office committee today approved a bill raising first class postal rates from three to four cents.

The bill would also raise the air mail postage from six to seven cents and increase second and third class rates.

The committee approved it by a vote of 13 to 8.

Second class rates would be increased gradually over a five-year period, amounting finally to an increase of 30 per cent for newspapers and magazines with less than 5 per cent advertising and a 120 per cent increase on publications with more than 5 per cent advertising in the farthest zones.

The rate increases apply only to out of county mail.

The minimum per piece charge would be increased from 1/8 to 1/4 cent. But the increase would not affect nonprofit religious, educational, scientific, philanthropic, agricultural, labor, veterans or fraternal organizations or associations.

French and Algerian Nationalists Discuss Ending of Rebellion

Editor's note: Walter Collins, a veteran of more than 30 years in the Middle East and United Press bureau manager in Cairo for the past 15 years, discloses full details in the following dispatch of a series of French-Algerian top secret meetings in Cairo called by the French in hopes of ending the Algerian rebellion. This is the first disclosure of the secret talks.

By WALTER COLLINS United Press Correspondent Cairo, Egypt — (U.P.) — French authorities have held a series of top secret meetings in Cairo with Algerian nationalists in an effort to end the Algerian rebellion, unimpeachable sources said today.

The sources told United Press the negotiations were arranged during a meeting in Cairo of French Foreign Minister Christian Pineau and Egyptian Premier Gamal Abdel Nasser.

Pineau, in Cairo early this year, asked Nasser to mediate between the French and the Algerians but Nasser declined and said all he could do was to arrange for contact to be made between the two sides.

Pineau and Nasser held two meetings in Cairo. After making his request for mediation, Pineau insisted that if Egypt agreed to mediate there must be a cease fire in Algeria, the sources said.

Lists Two Conditions Nasser replied that if there was to be a cease fire there would have to be two conditions: First, no arms must be delivered during the cease fire either to the French army in Algeria or to the Algerian liberation movement; second, neither France nor the Algerians should use the cease fire period for any direct or indirect advantage.

The discussion of a cease fire occupied Nasser and Pineau at their first meeting. At a second meeting Pineau sought to discuss various details of the Algerian rebellion, the sources said. Nasser declined on grounds this was an Algerian affair and that all he could do was to arrange a French-Algerian meeting.

Nasser asked Pineau for guarantees for safe exit from Algeria and safe return thereto for the Algerian delegation which would come to Cairo for the negotiations. France gave the necessary guarantees and April the delegation came to Cairo. It included Farhat Abbas, a nationalist leader who came here secretly.

France sent a delegation led by Joseph Begarat, chief of the Department of North African Affairs at the Quai D'Orsay. Georges Gorse, another French Middle East expert, was among the delegates.

Talks Last Two Weeks The negotiations between the French and Algerian delegations began April 4 in the utmost secrecy and lasted two weeks.

At the first meeting the Algerians made it clear to the French that before going into details they must know France's ideas regarding the future status of Algeria.

Begarat replied that France aimed at giving Algeria "administrative independence" which would retain Algeria in the French empire. The Algerians insisted on "recognition independence" which would be full freedom. They did not ask that it come into effect immediately but said it should take place within a few years.

After several meetings it appeared to the Algerians that France was only playing for time, the sources said. Begarat told the Algerians he could not give them any promise regarding "recognition independence" since he had no authority to do this.

Officials Cancel Election in Rural Protection Area

Central Point — An election in which Central Point Rural Fire Protection district residents were to consider approval of annexing land in the Gold Hill and Eagle Point areas Friday has been cancelled, Fire Chief Richard Krupp said today.

Krupp said district officials have been notified by the county assessor's office that the procedure for taxation of the area if it were annexed is not workable unless residents pay both the district levy and the state department of forestry for protection.

Seeks Advice District officials felt that residents who signed and submitted petitions for annexation to the district did not realize the taxation situation, Krupp said. Officials believed action on the petitions should be deferred until after Mrs. Elva Jennings, the county assessor, contacts the state tax commission for advice, Krupp said.

The election originally was called after the board of directors received two petitions with more than 45 signatures.

One area included land west of the present fire district, excluding the city of Gold Hill, and continuing west to the Rogue River Rural Fire district. The other area was from the north and west boundaries of the present district to the Shady Cove-Trail district and to a point near Brownsboro, excluding the city of Eagle Point.
