A Cure for Bowlegs

Every so often persons ask if anything could be done to straighten their bow-legs. Yes; sometimes much can be done to help the situation. I was just talking to my good friend, Dr. James Stack, of Chicago, who tells me that, especially when the bowed legs are associated with some arthritis and bad strains in the knee joints or ankle joints, an orthopedist can operate. He can take a little wedge out of the leg bone, that is most badly bowed, and in this way, to a large extent, he can straighten the leg.

Walter Alvarez

Years ago I saw a lovely Mexican girl who, when thrown from a horse, had the bone in one thigh broken. It was so badly set by the country physicians that later, in Mexico City, it was rebroken and reset by a surgeon. Again the result was bad and by now the girl's thigh was badly bowed and one extremity was shortened by 2½ inches. My friend, Dr. Ralph Ghormley, made a slanting cut through the bone so that the lower fragment could be pulled down past the upper so as to restore the proper length of the limb. He straightened the bone and wired the two fragments firmly together. The girl recovered with a perfect result.

Years ago, hundreds or thousands of people were bowlegged because of the then common rickets of childhood. This was due to malnutrition. Now that we know the great importance of vitamin D in infant nutrition, no child should be allowed to grow up with bow-legs.

Can Come Late in Life

Dr. Stack tells me that the bowing can be in both the thigh bone, or femor, and the lower main leg bone, or tibia, and it can be in the knee joint. Bowing can come late in life, due to what is called Paget's disease. In some of these cases a good orthopedist can straighten the bone or bones involved.

Dr. Stack tells me that most orthopedists are reluctant to operate on people just to make them look better. The trouble is that so often, when a person has such an operation, he ends up disappointed because the results are not as perfect as he expected them to be. Then the disappointed patient not only refuses to pay his bill but feels like suing the surgeon for damages. After a few experiences with such persons, the surgeon says, "No more." I have seen cases in which I thought the result remarkably good, but the patient, a woman, did not think so. She had expected after the operation to look just like Marilyn Monroe!

Many plastic surgeons refuse to perform a cosmetic operation on a person who does not need it very much. He or she is then too likely to be disappointed; again, because too much perfection was expected. The only person many a surgeon will operate on is someone who is so disfigured that almost any improvement in appearance will be gratefully received.

May Be Psychotic

I tell of these difficulties because many a person has asked me why a certain plastic surgeon refused to operate on him. I knew why, because the fellow was neither sensible nor emotionally stable. He may even have been a bit psychotic and a sure troublemaker. Sometimes the surgeon can see that he is dealing with a paranoid person who would feel murderous if anything went wrong. And things can go wrong. I remember a very able surgeon friend of mine who got into an awful mess because the man he operated on had some peculiar defect in his body which caused every wound to fester. Even when the surgeon operated with penicillin dripping steadily into the man's veins, his wound festered.

The average layman naturally cannot understand how such an accident can happen. Even we physicians have no idea why they happen, but we know that they can happen when on one is at fault. Because of these dangers and difficulties, I greatly admire the plastic surgeon who has the courage to go ahead and try to help thousands of unhappy people. In scores of cases all will go well and miracles will be performed, and then something will go wrong and the surgeon will have a nasty lawsuit on his hands.

We can't see why anyone would want to start the rumor that Shadey Wakefield has been deported.

This is a terrible thing to say about him just because the government sent him back to the country where he came from.

Some Kind Words Given for Smoking

New York—(U.P.)—Some kind words on smoking were presented Tuesday to the annual meeting of the National Tuberculosis Association.

Researchers of Tufts University School of Medicine, Boston, reported that smoking doesn't interfere with the breathing processes of healthy persons and may even provide "some improvement in certain aspects of pulmonary ventilation."

On the other hand, smoking caused "an impairment of the mechanics of breathing" in persons with heart or lung disease, Drs. Ernest O. Attinger and Maurice S. Segal reported, but the effect was "only transitory."

Dr. Leonard Greensburg, commissioner of New York City's Department of Air Pollution, said smoking may be related to increases in lung cancer but "contaminated air is also to blame."

Greensburg said "statistical evidence is accumulating to indicate that a portion of the increase of cancer of the lung is due to air pollution" caused among other things by the "use of internal combustion engines."

Higher Gasoline, Tire Tax Approved

Washington —(U.P.)— The Senate Finance Committee has approved higher taxes on gasoline, tires and trucks to raise $13,000,000,000 for a new 16-year highway building program.

The committee made only one change in highway tax increases already approved by the House. It voted to lower the proposed tax on heavy trucks. The Senate version would produce about $390 million less than the House measure over the 16-year period.

The committee okayed House provisions boosting the federal tax on gasoline, diesel and special motor fuels from two to three cents per gallon, and tire taxes from five to eight cents a pound.
