

UCLA Graduate Says USC Athletes Helped Through Secret Fund

Victoria, B.C.—(U.P.)—The Pacific Coast Conference, reeling under blows that threaten to knock the West Coast clear out of the football picture, girded itself today for an investigation into alleged proselytizing at the University of Southern California.

The Trojans, always a powerhouse in PCC football, came under the unwelcome glare of the PCC's investigative spotlight when a deputy district attorney from Los Angeles charged USC athletes had received $71,235 from a secret fund over a two-year period.

Two Suffer

Already two member schools have suffered severe penalties for permitting athletes to accept under-the-table payments. Washington was hit early this year with a $53,000 "fine" and probation. UCLA, at the PCC meeting here, was clobbered with a $95,000 fine, three-year probation and loss of one year eligibility for all athletes who accepted the illegal payments.

J. Miller Leavy, the attorney and prominent UCLA alumni, charged Wednesday a booster club which he refused to identify, "by its own records shows that in a two-year period . . . $71,235 was distributed to no less than 80 named University of Southern California athletes."

Los Angeles—(U.P.)—Members of the Trojan club, one of the University of Southern California's strongest alumni groups, today challenged other alumni organizations in the Pacific Coast Conference to make public their records in order "to clean up the whole mess."

The challenge followed charges by J. Miller Leavy, deputy district attorney and member of UCLA's Alumni Athletic Advisory Board, that USC paid out $71,235 over a two-year period to athletes.

Leavy told a press conference Wednesday he presented evidence that USC was guilty of "undercover" activities to the PCC as an individual "so we can put all violators on the same basis."

The Trojan club, although not named by Leavy as the violator, said it was willing to cooperate with the PCC if it could be assured other groups would have the courage "to come clean."

"All of the alumni groups are equally guilty," said one Trojan club member. Other members declared "an honest confession" by alumni groups would result in drafting a "realistic code" for the conference.
